Pecans Slightly Behind Schedule but Promising

By Nathan Gregory
MSU Extension Service

Harvest is slightly behind schedule for Mississippi's pecan crop due to a cold, wet spring and early summer, but quality and yield are looking good so far in much of the state.

One exception is in the state's southeast quadrant, which was battered by Hurricane Ida in late August.

"Wind damage caused broken branches, downed trees, loss of leaves, increased disease pressure and overall increase in tree stress," said Eric Stafne, fruit and nut specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service. "I am seeing trees re-leaf now in south Mississippi, where most of the crop is closer to poor condition. We also had tremendous rainfall in the spring and early summer that led to high disease amounts, especially pecan scab."

Max Draughn, president of the Mississippi Pecan Growers Association, acknowledged a heavy year for scab, a fungal disease that develops in rainy conditions from shucks, leaf petioles and stems infected the previous season. It is characterized by spots on the leaves, which then infect shucks and eventually lead to nuts to shedding from the pecan trees.

"Rains have been timely for most of the year, so quality of pecans should be excellent," Draughn said. "Even though it has been a heavy year for scab, most managed orchards have been able to adequately address the situation."

The American Pecan Council reports that Mississippi has 823 pecan orchards on a total of 8,400 acres. Since 2018, the state has the second most pecan acreage added by percentage of the pecan-producing states, and it ranks ninth in annual production nationally.

However, as more new orchards begin producing, Mississippi will move up rapidly on production, Draughn said.

"Mississippi has had a nice increase in the number of orchards planted in the state in the last few years," he said. "Many of our orchards are now being managed to increase the quality of the nuts being produced."

Older orchards in the state primarily grow the Stuart, Mahan and Desirable pecan varieties. Newer orchards are branching out and growing the Creek, Elliott, Excel, Gafford, Jackson and Pawnee varieties.

"There is a move toward more low-input pecan varieties that can be grown with much less spraying for disease and pesticide application," Draughn said. "This also reduces cost of production."

Wholesale market prices are rebounding from last year's low prices due to COVID-19. Cold storage inventories have been depleted since this time last year. Heading into the fall of 2020, cold storage had approximately double what would be in inventory in a normal year.

The retail range on prices per pound for shelled pecan halves is $13 to $16.

"Prices are still somewhat depressed due to tariff disputes between the U.S. and China, but interest from buyers in China is strong for this early in the season," Draughn said. "Retail prices should remain close to last year's. Average wholesale prices are hard to judge due to the wide range of quality and size that are the main drivers of price."

Mississippi Pecan History

By Mississippi Pecan
Growers Association

Pecans are well adapted and widely grown throughout Mississippi. Where the proper varieties have been chosen, good success can be expected near the Gulf Coast and the Delta, but other areas of the state can support pecan production, as well.

Historically, numerous varieties originated in Jackson County, many of which have no commercial viability today. In the 1920s and 1930s, the five most prominent varieties in the southeast were Alley, Pabst, Schley, Success and Stuart, all originating in Jackson County. Of the historical varieties, only Stuart, Schley, Success and Desirable continue to be of commercial importance today.

Nearly 75 percent of pecan production in Mississippi is from improved variety trees. The remaining trees are native or seedling; some of these are in orchards and some in natural groves along the river bottoms in the Delta area. Several hurricanes, including Camille and Katrina, devastated pecan orchards in the six counties near the Gulf of Mexico. Many orchards were entirely destroyed and others severely damaged.

In general, Mississippi growers produce, harvest and market two million to four million pounds of pecans per year, including improved varieties and natives, from more than 14,000 acres. In the 1930s, production ranged between five million and six million pounds annually. During the 1960s, the average annual production of pecans ranged from 15 million to 20 million pounds, with the largest harvest during that decade coming in at 30 million pounds. As a state, average yields may be as low as 200 pounds per acre, but intensive and standard orchards in a good year can produce 1,000 pounds or more per acre.

Government Policies Creating Serious Challenges for Commerce

By Andy Gipson

Andy Gipson

As we enter the fourth quarter of the year, 2021 is shaping up as another one for the books. While life for many is getting back to a pre-pandemic "normal," Americans continue to endure the many impacts of COVID-19 - especially the government's response to the pandemic. The "Delta variant" reminded everyone that this virus (like all viruses) does mutate and can easily rear its ugly head again. But right now, the problems we face are the direct result of a combination of federal government policies resulting in serious challenges to commerce in Mississippi and nationwide.

Labor shortages are causing significant problems for many industries, including agriculture, food service, trucking, shipping, healthcare, and retail to name a few. Federal government policies have made it more profitable for the American workforce to stay home rather than providing an honest day's work for an honest day's pay. From manufacturing to food service, industries across the board are faced with the task of producing more products with significantly less labor. Farmers - large and small - are feeling the impacts too. For instance, our catfish and meat processors are having trouble finding enough employees, not to mention the challenge of finding steady, reliable on-farm labor which has been an issue for decades. For example, it's been a greater challenge this fall to obtain adequate labor to help harvest and then haul crops to the elevators. These are just a few examples resulting in fewer products on the shelves, longer wait times for services and higher prices due to inflation.

Persistent labor shortages have intensified the logistical challenges being felt across most industries. The growing backlog at ports is causing greater supply chain bottlenecks. Americans had become accustomed to getting what we want at the drop of a hat, but that is no longer the case even for Amazon Prime customers. Now, container ships are sitting at ports for weeks waiting to be unloaded. As evidence, we were told back in September to begin Christmas shopping early to ensure gifts may be delivered on time. Due to the major shortage of truckers, rail and port workers, supply chains have been severely disrupted at ports nationwide with too few port and rail workers to unload and reload cargo.

In recent reports, it was noted that these labor shortages and supply chain disruptions are making it difficult for even our school systems to get cafeteria food products. But Mississippians understand the food and grocery challenges go beyond school cafeterias. We are all feeling this in our homes, budgets and kitchens as we feed our families right here in Mississippi. Food prices continue to increase, and these price increases should not be interpreted as putting more money back into the pockets of farmers.

In fact, our farmers are experiencing much higher input costs in 2021 as they continue to work producing American food, fiber and shelter. There are significant increased production costs, such as higher feed, fuel and fertilizer costs that are all reflected in higher grocery prices. And rising fuel prices are affecting not only farmers, but every single American at our gas pumps with average prices now topping $3.00 a gallon in Mississippi.

To add insult to injury, the Biden Administration recently announced an unprecedented nationwide federal vaccine mandate threatening millions of American jobs and potentially eliminating the livelihoods of millions of working Americans, even those employed in healthcare, our first responders and the private sector.

There is a coming crisis in American commerce fueled by an idle workforce, supply chain shortages, inflation, and federal mandates. But there is a solution, and the crisis can be averted. It's a common sense solution: workers must keep working, and those not working must get back to work. To reach this goal, federal and state governments must reverse their anti-work policies and encourage more people and the next generation to enter the workforce. We need more people working, not less. Americans should take a lesson from our farmers and loggers who have always continued to work hard from "sun up 'til sun down" to put food on our plates, clothes on our backs and a roof over our heads. Americans, it's time to get back to work!

From Our Kitchen To Yours

Southern-Style Pecan Snacks

****

Southern Praline Pecans

2 cups sugar
2 cups pecan halves
3/4 cup buttermilk
2 tablespoons butter
1/8 teaspoon salt
3/4 teaspoon baking soda
Parchment paper

Combine first 5 ingredients in a large heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring gently, 10 minutes or until sugar dissolves. Cover and cook over medium heat 2-3 minutes to wash down sugar crystals from sides of pan. Uncover and cook, stirring constantly, until a candy thermometer registers 235° (soft ball stage). Remove from heat and stir in baking soda. Beat with a wooden spoon just until mixture begins to thicken. Working rapidly, drop by tablespoonfuls onto parchment paper; let stand 30 minutes or until firm. Source: SouthernLiving.com.

Southern Pecan Pie Muffins

1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup light brown sugar, packed
1 cup chopped pecans
2 large eggs
11 tablespoons real butter, melted

Place 9 cupcake paper liners into regular muffin pan and spray with nonstick cooking spray. In a bowl, combine the flour, brown sugar and pecans until mixed well. In a separate bowl, beat the eggs until foamy, then add melted butter. Stir well. Combine the egg mixture with the flour mixture. Stir until moistened. Spoon the batter into the muffin cups. You will need to fill them to almost full. Bake at 350° for about 20-25 minutes; around the 15-minute mark, pull them out and sprinkle with chopped pecans or place one pecan half on each one, then put them back into the oven to finish baking. Bake until a toothpick inserted into the middle comes out clean. Source: TheCountryCook.net.

Green Beans with Caramelized Pecans

1/2 cup pecan halves and pieces
2 1/2 pounds green beans, trimmed
5 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/3 cup shallot, finely chopped
3 tablespoons packed light brown sugar
1 teaspoon kosher salt, or to taste
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, or to taste

Spread out pecans on a rimmed sheet pan and bake at 350° until pale golden on inside, about 6-8 minutes. Cool and coarsely chop. Have ready a colander submerged in a large bowl of ice water. Cook beans in pot of well-salted boiling water, uncovered, until just tender, 5-8 minutes. Transfer beans to colander in ice water to stop cooking, then drain well and dry on towels. Heat butter in heavy skillet over moderately high heat until foam subsides, then add shallot and cook, stirring until pale golden, 2-3 minutes. Reduce heat to medium and stir in sugar until almost dissolved, then cook pecans, stirring, 1 minute. Add green beans, kosher salt and pepper; sauté beans, turning with tongs, until heated through, 2-4 minutes. Transfer to a platter and serve. Source: Epicurious.com.

Pecan Rice

1 cup brown rice
2 tablespoons margarine
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
1/2 cup finely chopped pecans
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1/4 teaspoon dried basil
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt

In a saucepan bring 2 cups water to a boil. Add rice and stir. Reduce heat to low, cover and simmer for 40 minutes. When rice is done, melt margarine in a small skillet over medium heat. In the butter sauté onions, pecans, parsley, basil, ginger, pepper and salt. Once the onions are tender stir mixture into rice and mix well. Source: AllRecipes.com.

Commissioner Andy Gipson Announces Inaugural Standing for American Freedom Event

By Hannah East
Marketing Specialist - MDAC

Commissioner Andy Gipson announced Standing for American Freedom, a patriotic concert event, will be held inside the Mississippi Coliseum on Sunday, December 5, at 5:30 p.m. in recognition of the 80th Anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, which will be observed nationwide on December 7. This event will be held in partnership with the Friends of Mississippi Veterans.

"We are honored to host the Standing for American Freedom concert in the Mississippi Coliseum at the State Fairgrounds," said Commissioner Gipson. "In recognition of Pearl Harbor Day, we want to honor all of our veterans and active military personnel who dedicate their lives to protecting our freedoms. We will also recognize Mississippi first responders and medical professionals who never stopped working to keep us safe. I invite everyone to make plans to join us for this year's preeminent patriotic event honoring Mississippi veterans still Standing for American Freedom."

During this event, all Mississippi veterans of each military branch will be recognized and honored including surviving Mississippi World War II veterans. In addition, several special guests including former Governor Phil Bryant and Mississippi Veterans Affairs Executive Director Stacey Pickering will pay tribute to our veterans' defense of American freedom. Standing for American Freedom will feature two concert performances. During the program which begins at 5:30 p.m., world famous patriotic country music artist Lee Greenwood will open with a live version of God Bless the USA among several other songs. Headliner and acclaimed country music artist Travis Tritt will take the stage at 7:00 p.m. to perform his patriotic song What Say You as well as a full 90-minute concert.
