Strong Demand Fuels Interest in Pecan Trees

By Linda Breazeale
MSU Extension Service

As the time for pecan harvest approaches, some Mississippians are contemplating adding new orchards or expanding or renovating old ones.

Eric Stafne, fruit and nut crops specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said growers want to capitalize on the demand for pecans, which is increasing domestically and overseas.

"Many orchards across the state have been neglected. In some cases, new owners or managers want to know how to return them to production. Renovating takes a lot of effort and may depend on the varieties and density of the existing orchard,"

Stafne said. "Most likely, the orchards will need to be thinned, fertilized and pest controlled for some time before trees can recover from neglect."

Stafne said returning old trees to production may take a lot of money up-front and in the future.

"Older varieties will always need more spraying. Even varieties that were at one time resistant to the pecan scab fungus, may no longer be effective and may be susceptible to new problems, too," he said.

Stafne, who works at the MSU South Mississippi Branch Experiment Station in Poplarville, said renovation efforts begin with performing soil tests and responding to the recommendations. Growers should also test the trees for their nutritional needs.

"Pecan orchards need to be fertilized every year. It will take time for the trees to recover from deficits," he said. "Growers should test the soil once every three years or so. Commercial growers should test the trees more often -- at least every other year."

A homeowner who wonders why the lone pecan tree in his or her yard is not productive needs to understand the birds and the bees -- and the wind.

"Pecan trees need cross-pollination from other nearby pecan trees to be productive," Stafne said.

Max Draughn of Raymond is president of the Mississippi Pecan Growers Association. He said many growers are also interested in planting new orchards or expanding existing orchards. There are many good varieties available now, but the newer ones may be harder to find because of the nationwide expansion.

"Growers first need to decide what they want to do with their pecans," Draughn said. "Will the pecans be for personal use, retail or wholesale? Once that is determined, we can talk about varieties and equipment needs."

Draughn said most people do not realize how much work goes into producing pecans. After nuts appear, growers spend the next six months battling weather, insects and diseases.

"Hobby orchards are best for low-input varieties with minimal spraying needs," he said. "Some other varieties may need 15-18 sprays throughout the growing season. Those are higher yielding varieties that are better for commercial production. They will require more management, equipment and labor."

For commercial purposes, growers should not plant less than 40 acres of trees, Draughn said. The best profit potential begins around 200 acres.

Harvest in Draughn's orchards near Raymond is significantly ahead of pecan orchards in the Delta and on the coast.

"We have a heavy crop this year, with more than 100,000 pounds harvested by the middle of October," he said. "Quality will be better this year than last year when the late drought hurt pecans in their final weeks of development."

Draughn said wholesale prices for unshelled nuts range from lows of 80 cents to $3.50 per pound, depending on the size and quality.

3 large eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 day-old croissants, halved
1/2 cup chopped toasted pecans
1/2 cup honey
3 tablespoons butter, divided

Whisk together half-and-half, eggs, and vanilla. Dip croissant halves into mixture. Cook pecans, honey, and two tablespoons butter in a saucepan until hot; keep warm. Melt one tablespoon butter in a nonstick skillet or griddle over medium heat. Add four croissant halves; cook until golden brown. Repeat. Serve with honey pecan mixture.

Fettuccine with Zucchini and Pecans

3/4 cup coarsely chopped pecans
1 12-ounce package fettuccine
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound small zucchini, shredded
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 cup freshly grated Asiago cheese
1/4 cup thinly sliced fresh basil

Heat pecans in a small nonstick skillet over medium-low heat, stirring often, six to eight minutes or until toasted and fragrant. Prepare fettuccine according to package directions. Meanwhile, melt butter with olive oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium heat; add zucchini and garlic, and sauté three to four minutes or until zucchini is tender. Toss with hot cooked fettuccine, pecans, Asiago cheese, and basil. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper to taste. Serve immediately.

Cream Cheese-and-Olive Pecan Bites

1/2 cup finely chopped pimiento-stuffed Spanish olives
1 tablespoon chopped fresh chives
1/4 teaspoon pepper
80 large toasted pecan halves

Stir together cream cheese, olives, chives, and pepper. Spread onto 40 large toasted pecan halves; top with remaining 40 large toasted pecan halves, forming sandwiches.

Pecan-Honey Butter

1/2 cup butter, softened
1/3 cup finely chopped pecans, toasted
2 tablespoons honey
1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Stir together all ingredients until blended. Cover and chill until ready to serve.

Fudgy Flourless Chocolate-Pecan Cookies

3 cups powdered sugar
2/3 cup unsweetened cocoa
1/4 teaspoon salt
3 large egg whites, at room temperature
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 4-ounce semisweet chocolate bar, chopped
1 cup toasted chopped pecans

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Sift together powdered sugar, cocoa, and salt in a large bowl. Whisk egg whites until frothy. Stir egg whites and vanilla into powdered sugar mixture (batter will be very thick). Stir in chopped chocolate and pecans until well combined. Drop cookies three inches apart using a 1 1/2-inch cookie scoop (about two tablespoons) on a parchment paper-lined baking sheet lightly greased with cooking spray. Bake in preheated oven until tops are shiny and cracked, eight to ten minutes. Cool on baking sheet five minutes; transfer to wire racks, and cool completely, about 15 minutes.

Pecan-Stuffed Pickled Jalapenos

Whole pickled jalapeno peppers
Spreadable garlic-and-herb cheese, softened
Chopped toasted pecans

Cut peppers in half lengthwise; remove and discard seeds and membranes. Pipe softened cheese into each pepper half. Press peppers, cheese sides down into chopped pecans. Place peppers on tray, pecan side up, cover and chill up to one day.

Hot Caramel-Pecan Topping

1 19-ounce jar butterscotch-caramel topping
1 1/2 cups chopped toasted pecans
2 tablespoons whipping cream
2 tablespoons maple syrup
1/2 teaspoon kosher salt

Cook butterscotch-caramel topping, pecans, whipping cream, maple syrup, and salt in a saucepan, stirring occasionally, three to five minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serve warm over ice cream.

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/2 teaspoon ground red pepper
3 cups pecans

Stir together lime juice, olive oil, paprika, salt, chili powder, and ground red pepper. Add pecans; toss. Spread in a lightly greased aluminum foil-lined jelly roll pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 to 14 minutes or until pecans are toasted and dry, stirring occasionally. Cool completely.

Transporting Wild Hogs Threatens Land, Crops and Livestock

By Robert Nathan Gregory
MSU Extension Service

The first rule of transporting wild hogs is to not transport wild hogs.

Bronson Strickland is the Mississippi State University Extension Service wildlife biologist and management specialist. He said the best way residents can help eradicate wild hogs is to hunt them while also trapping and killing them. Hunters who bring wild hogs into the state or relocate them for hunting, however, are committing a crime.

"Transporting and releasing wild hogs is illegal, and this is the root of the problem we are having with these animals in Mississippi and all throughout the Southeast," Strickland said. "We are seeing major issues with these animals because they are being moved and released into areas where they can harm people and their property. The future of Mississippi farms, land and wildlife depends on hunters understanding that wild hogs are not trophies, but pests."

On private land, there is no limit or season for hunting wild hogs or any nuisance animals. Anthony Ballard, nuisance wildlife biologist with the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks, advised people who hunt wild hogs at night to take precautions.

"Call your county conservation office and sheriff's office before hunting to let them know where you are, what you'll be doing and how long you plan to be there," Ballard said. "Be aware of your surroundings, including any nearby houses and roads. Black bears have been spotted in almost all parts of the state, so make sure you're aiming at a black pig instead of a black bear."

Public wildlife management areas, or WMAs, have different regulations, which can be found on <http://mdwfp.com>.

"On our WMAs, wild hogs can only be taken incidentally. For example, wild hogs can be taken during small-game season, but only with weapons and ammunition that can be legally used to hunt small game on that area," Ballard said. "We encourage hunters take any opportunity they have to neutralize wild hogs, but a season dedicated to wild hogs would make them harder to trap for our WMA personnel and would ultimately be less effective at removing them."

A violation of the law prohibiting live wild hog transport carries a fine of $2,000 to $5,000, a jail term of up to five days and forfeiture of all hunting, trapping and fishing privileges for at least a year.

Call 1-800-BE-SMART to report anyone who transports or releases wild hogs.

Landowners affected by wild hog damage often set traps to capture the pests before they do more harm. The sophistication of these traps depends on the landowners' needs and budgets, but all live cage traps for wild hogs must have a trap door, slide gate or similar mechanism. Mississippi also requires that traps have an opening at the top so non-target species like deer and bears can escape.

The most common types are box, cage and corral traps. Strickland said corral traps are the most effective for wild hogs.

"Large corral traps can capture the entire social unit, called a sounder, in a single trapping event," he said. "This is important because hogs are smart animals and become 'trap shy.' That's why we recommend landowners catch the entire sounder on the first attempt."

Electronics are not strictly necessary for traps to effectively snare hogs. However, placing cameras in areas where damage is found improves the chances of catching the animals. Cameras help identify where the pests are coming from and how many there are.

The trap should face the trail. A larger structure is more likely to attract the hogs and make them begin to trust the trap. Give the animals time to feel comfortable entering the trap regularly.

Bait, most commonly corn and grain, lures hogs into a trap, but it can only be placed directly on the ground inside the corral. Bait used outside the trap must be in an aboveground, covered feeder such as a trough.

"You can use grain products from the day after the spring turkey season to the day before archery season opens, but only in aboveground feeders or stationary spin-cast feeders," Ballard said. "Feeders can be placed in plain sight with no distance restriction, but areas must be clear of all bait for 10 days before hunting game animals."

How the trap door is activated will depend on the kind of trap and whether any cameras or other electronics are employed.

MDAC Continues to Assist Landowners with Cogongrass Control

By Kenneth Calcote
Division Director
Bureau of Plant Industry - MDAC

Cogongrass, Imperata cylindrica, ranks as the world's seventh worst noxious weed and currently infests over 1.2 billion acres worldwide. Cogongrass has been detected in 66 of Mississippi's 82 counties. The southern region of Mississippi has seen the worst infestation of this invasive weed, but Cogongrass has also spread into the central and north central parts of the state.

Cogongrass Control Demonstration Program

The Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce (MDAC)/Bureau of Plant Industry (BPI) continues to assist landowners in combating this noxious weed through its Control Demonstration Program. Through this program, MDAC provides herbicide to landowners in Mississippi at no charge. MDAC also provides treatment guidelines and spray options on how and when to apply the herbicide. MDAC staff participates in local meetings, training landowners and the general public on the identification of Cogongrass.

Landowners detecting Cogongrass on their property can apply to participate by submitting an application to BPI. The application can be found on the MDAC website at http://www.mdac.ms.gov/wp-content/uploads/bpi\_plant\_cogongrass.pdf, at your local Mississippi State University Extension Service office or your local USDA Natural Resource Conservation Service office. Once the application is received, BPI will send an inspector to confirm the presence of Cogongrass and the extent of the infestation. The inspector will provide hands-on training on identification and the proper use of herbicides to control Cogongrass. After accessing the infestation and training, the inspector will return to confirm the herbicide has been applied and observe the degree of control.

The Bureau of Plant Industry began participating in this program in 2003, which has helped approximately 4,955 Mississippi landowners treat over 32,263 acres of Cogongrass. The goal of the program is to educate landowners and the general public, while providing herbicide to assist with Cogongrass outbreaks.

Impact of Cogongrass on the Environment

The need to combat Cogongrass in a timely manner is important because it can quickly impact the envi-

Cogongrass is a tall (2-5 ft.) perennial grass with lime-green foliage. The leaf blades have a mid-vein which is clearly offset to one side, and serrated (toothed) edges. The seed heads that appear in late spring or early summer are fuzzy, white, and plume-like.

ronment around it.

Cogongrass produces a dense mass of rhizomes that are more than 60% of the plants total biomass. The rhizomes and roots release a chemical into the soil that inhibits the growth of surrounding plants, thereby suppressing all other plants. Cogongrass also produces 80 to 90 stems per square foot with leaves that are 6 to 47 inches tall with dense off-center midribs.

Cogongrass quickly invades areas of low management like abandoned fields, highway rights of way, utility rights of way, and commercial forest plantations by means of seed disbursement and movement of rhizomes. In late spring or early summer, Cogongrass can produce up to 3,000 wind dispersed seeds that are much like dandelion seeds. Natural disasters such as hurricanes, tornados and floods can carry the seeds for hundreds of miles. Also, rhizomes and seeds can be spread by contaminated equipment used for rights of way maintenance, logging, fire control and construction. Contaminated plant material such as landscaping material and sod can become carriers.

Economically, Cogongrass impacts the forest industry by choking out newly planted seedlings. Cogongrass is also considered a fire hazard which burns vigorously at over 800° F. This will mortally wound trees or stress the trees making them susceptible to insects, thereby impacting the value of land.

Cogongrass has several common names such as Japanese Blood Grass, Red Baron Grass, and Spreargrass which are often offered for sale on the internet as ornamental grasses. Cogongrass is listed as a regulated noxious weed on the Mississippi Noxious Weed List, which prohibits the sale and movement of the weed.
