The Benefits of the Farmers Market Culture

By Britney N. Mack

I have always admired the coming of a new season. It reminds me of second chances, the opportunity to set (and reach) new goals, and the gradual milestones we experience in life—some planned and some unplanned. Spring has got to be one of the more pleasant seasons, with her colorful outfits embellished with floral prints and her humble—yet sunny—personality.

She feeds the world with her abundance of fruits and vegetables and supplies farm animals with rays of sunshine to step with pride and joy as they carry on throughout their days. All of this greatness that spring brings does not come to an end here.

Of course, we are fortunate to have farmers markets, which are typically more popular when the spring and summer seasons approach. Sunnier seasons call for a greater variety of fruits and vegetables.

The farmers market concept is a uniquely-positioned business model that fits between that of a retail grocery store and produce stands that you frequently pass by when taking long road trips from one corner of Mississippi to another. A farmers market atmosphere is right between those of a big-chain grocery and a small fruit stand. For those who prefer a more intimate environment than a grocery store but a larger variety than a fruit stand sometimes, the farmers market would be a suitable alternative.

At farmers markets today, one can find fresh, locally-grown fruits and vegetables, dairy products, condiments, sauces, and seasonings, herbs, meats, fresh cut flowers and plants, baked goods, and arts and crafts made by hand. Products are displayed alongside the smiling faces of the men and women who worked hard to provide something fresh, original, or artistic.

With their peer-to-peer business model and operational flexibility, farmers markets are here to stay. According to the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA), the number of operating farmers markets have increased by over 7% since 2013, based on the number of markets listed in their USDA's National Farmers Market Directory.

From a marketing perspective, one could argue that the unique selling propositions of a farmers market are these two things: (1) locality and (2) a more interactive, personalized transactional culture. It's not quite often that you can find such a personal experience associated with shopping for food, art, and a few other necessities for the house and office. This is an experience that benefits the whole family, allowing them to spend quality time together and to socialize with friends and neighbors.

Shoppers tend to have the same ultimate goal in mind—to support the local economy while seeking fresher and more original alternatives. It doesn't hurt that customers have the opportunity to mingle with vendors—who are typically green-thumbed crop farmers, agricultural enthusiasts, creatives, and beef producers eager to share their brand stories, recipes, and interesting how-to lessons.

The benefits obtained from farmers markets are multifaceted. There are three groups that directly benefit from farmers markets: the farmers, the customers, and the community. With farmers markets' low-barrier entries, farmers can use trial and error to get a "feel" for what goods their target audience has a preference for at little cost—possibly even design their own niche in their respective market.

Most importantly, farmers can receive a quicker turnaround on a large profit by selling direct to the consumer themselves. (The same applies to artists and other vendor types selling at the farmers market.)

It goes without saying that customers benefit from the farmers markets as well. Since some farmers markets accept payment from government assistance programs—such as SNAP and WIC Farmers Market Nutrition Program—customers of various socioeconomic statuses can enjoy shopping at them. In addition, they have access to convenient parking, fresher foods, and a wider variety of food options (e.g., organic foods, pasture-raised meats, free-range eggs, handmade cheeses).

Not to mention, farmers markets remind me of religious or social institutions—people gather for a primary reason, but there are secondary reasons that make their experiences even more enjoyable. Thus, shopper retention rates are high.

Benefits for the community extend from those benefits consumers receive from their shopping experience at the markets. Farmers markets connect urban residents to rural residents for a mutually beneficial exchange. We live in a fast, busy, tech-savvy society in which people are not connected often in face-to-face interactions as they were decades ago. Social media has played a pivotal role in people accepting digital relationships as their predominate mode of human interaction.

The farmers market offers people the opportunity to receive face-to-face human contact. They also bridge the gap of social distance between rural and urban communities and diverse social classes. While farmers markets promote a gathering of people in a specific area, growth opportunities for neighboring shopping centers, restaurants, and other small businesses are present. This results in a domino effect of a cooperative community enhancing local economic prosperity.

Meanwhile, it is up to us to keep farmers markets in operation. Supporting our local economy is important. Providing fresh food to the people who sit at our dinner table is also important. Artists, farmers, gardeners, and those who have magical hands in the kitchen continue to provide us with a variety of goods that will nourish our bodies (foods), decorate our most cherished spaces (arts and crafts), and beautify our surroundings (plants and flowers).

We must proudly accept these great things that they have to offer. The spring season is upon us, and summer is approaching soon. Let's reap the benefits of these agriculturally-generous seasons!

The Mississippi Farmers Market is located at 929 High Street, Jackson, Mississippi 39202. It serves thousands of customers on Saturdays between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m. The Market will have its annual Summer Kickoff event on Saturday, June 1, 2019, a fun-filled event with many activities to engage customers and vendors during standard business operations.

Further details are forthcoming and will be accessible on the Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram pages of the Mississippi Farmers Market and in the subsequent issue of the What's Fresh email newsletter, which is published every Thursday. ## Mississippi Market Bulletin

P. O. Box 1118

Jackson, MS 39215-1118

Please allow four weeks for your first issue delivery.

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Advertising rules and guidelines have been established for the Mississippi Market Bulletin in order to comply with regulations enforced by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce and to maintain the objectives of the publication. The staff of the Mississippi Market Bulletin reserves the right to edit, revise or reject any advertisement.

The Mississippi Market Bulletin assumes no responsibility for any notice appearing in the Bulletin nor for any transaction resulting from published notices. Advertisers are cautioned that it is against the law to misrepresent any product offered for sale in public notices or advertisements carried in any publication that is delivered by the United States Postal Service.

- In order to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin you must be a subscriber. It's FREE to advertise, just include your name, mailing address and account number that the subscription is listed under on each ad that you submit (this information will not be printed). Each subscriber is allowed to advertise two ads in the Bulletin, listing one ad per category.
- All listings must be agriculture related (raised, grown, produced or operated on your farm). At the top of your ad, write the category that the ad should be listed under. We reserve the right to edit, revise or reject each ad. Please print or type your ad.
- There is a 30-word limit for classified advertisements, this includes: price (on the item you are selling), your city, county and telephone number or name and complete address must be included in the ad if you do not list a telephone number. Ads cannot be held over from one issue to another. You must submit them for each issue.
- Out-of-state residents are not eligible to advertise with the following exceptions: Out-of-state ads are allowed in the "Wanting To Buy" category. Out-of-state ads are allowed for individuals owning farm property within the state that is being offered for sale.

Semper Fi/Jinx McCain Horsemanship Program/Dixie Challenge 2019 Celebrates 5th Year of Helping Wounded Veterans

By Mississippi Quarter Horse Association

Mississippi Quarter Horse Youth Association hosted 16 wounded veterans from all over the country to Jackson Mississippi, and introduced them to horsemanship skills, roping and sorting in a very short 4-day period. It's part of the Semper Fi Fund/Jinx McCain Horsemanship program and is dubbed "Dixie Challenge."

Brooks Derryberry, President Mississippi Quarter Horse Association and coordinator of this event says "We are a family, a community of like mind people who believe in and support our veterans. The Dixie Challenge is supported by the generosity of many people in the Jackson area. I believe this is the only Jinx McCain Horsemanship event that is completely community based and run on community donations. The only thing Semper Fi Fund pays for at this clinic is, travel to get the veterans here and lodging. Thank you all for making this happen for the 5th year."

The highlight of the event was the final day which is a competition. The veterans demonstrate their horsemanship skills by working a pattern. Next comes the roping competition in which the veterans rope a moving target. The final, and according to the participants, the most fun is the sorting event in which each participant must cut and move cattle from one pen to another following a specific order.

Considering some of the veterans have never been around a horse, this competition is a testament to their ability to adjust to their surroundings and persevere. These veterans are amazing people, so dedicated, so intense, so willing to try and so very thankful for the opportunity.

Quote from a 2019 Participant

"I want to thank you for selecting me for the Dixie Challenge this year. It truly was a life altering event for me. I have really been struggling for the past couple years to keep things together both mentally and physically. I had truly lost my purpose in life and was simply going through the motions from day to day without any passion or motivation. This clinic allowed me to put my current state of affairs on hold (remove the cell phone, the stress, the headaches & the bad people) and surround myself with encouragement and good caring people. That simple break allowed me enough room to refocus, find myself again and chase a dream. It felt like a fire was ignited in me again that I thought was dead. I got home and my wife said I looked the happiest I have been for the past 2 years. This simple clinic allowed me to immerse myself in a life long passion and realize there is more to life and what I want to get out of it. Again I want to thank you, the SemperFi Fund, and the entire Mississippi Quarter Horse Association for allowing me start this journey of healing!"

Out-of-State Interests Mobilizing Against Mississippi's Working Forests

By Andy Gipson
Mississippi Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce

Should out-of-state interests decide what's best for a rural Mississippi town of about 3,000 people, or should the local community decide?

You'd think the answer to that question would be obvious, but for an outspoken eco-group from North Carolina, the town of Lucedale should not be able to decide its own destiny.

The heart of the dispute? Mississippi's second largest ag industry, our growing forest products industry – a potential economic boon for our state.

Today, wood products are becoming more prevalent in our daily lives. From sustainable wood buildings to paper packaging needed for e-commerce giants like Amazon to wood pellets, a growing form of renewable energy, wood is increasingly in demand.

With plentiful, well-managed forests, Mississippi is well-positioned to benefit from this and gain hundreds if not thousands of new jobs. That is, unless a group of largely out-of-state interests has their way.

Based in Asheville, North Carolina, they call themselves the "Dogwood Alliance" – and they're against pretty much anything that comes from the forest.

In March, the group's Executive Director penned an op-ed in The Hill, a Washington D.C. publication, arguing against using trees for building products, paper, packaging, or energy. They effectively oppose the entire forest products industry, which supports more than 2 million jobs nationwide.

Now, they're coming here.

This month, Dogwood and their out-of-state allies will travel to Mississippi to protest the construction of a renewable wood energy facility in Lucedale set to create 100 direct jobs and hundreds more indirect and related jobs in George County, while increasing earning potential for local landowners.

Dogwood's efforts are misguided – both from an economic and even an environmental perspective.

We've seen this move before in Mississippi – out-of-state interests from wealthy cities traveling to Mississippi to protest jobs in our small towns.

While Asheville, North Carolina, may not need 100 new jobs, we want them here in Mississippi, particularly in rural Mississippi. Gaining investment in the talented people and growing economic engine of Mississippi should be a top priority for our local and national leaders. Throwing up roadblocks to new jobs isn't just unhelpful; it's an immoral harm to those who are most in need in our rural communities.

In George County, for example, the unemployment rate is nearly twice as high as Asheville's. Simply put, we need the jobs supplied by the forest products industry. In fact, working forests support over 47,000 jobs in Mississippi and a payroll of more than $1.7 billion.

But this isn't just an economic win. It's also a win for our environment. Mississippi, like other Southeastern states, has high standards for sustainable forestry practices. Because of this, we actually have more trees today – not less. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the total volume of trees grown in the U.S. Southeast has increased by 50 percent over the last 50 years, and today, private forest owners are growing 40 percent more wood than they remove every year. The reality is that a strong market for forest products ensures that landowners keep planting trees.

While these out-of-state activists may live in a place that doesn't need or want forest industry jobs, we know better here in Mississippi. Let's continue finding ways to sustainably harness our abundant natural resources and grow our rural economy, providing more opportunities for all Mississippians.

Wood pellets are the most common type of pellet fuel.
