Watermelon Harvest Underway as Summer Rains Ramp Up

By Susan Collins-Smith
MSU Extension Service

Harvest is in full swing for Mississippi watermelon producers as rains ramp up, increasing the likelihood of disease and ruined melons.

“Last week, everything looked good,” said Heath Steede, Mississippi State University Extension agent in George County. “But we have had rains every day for the past five days, which is starting to negatively affect the crop. This is the point in the watermelon growing season where things can go either way very quickly.”

Watermelons need a balance of sun, rain and warmth to reach peak ripeness and sweetness. Early-season rains help watermelons grow, but excess rain at this point in production will cause melons to ruin and increase the potential for disease problems.

Steede, who works with seven commercial growers in his county, said harvest is in full swing.

“Everything from here on out is all according to the weather,” Steede said on June 19. “And we’re starting to see more disease because of all this rain.”

While most of Mississippi’s watermelon production is concentrated in the southeast corner of the state, some producers in the northern half of the state also grow the summertime staple.

“We’re planted and growing up here,” said James Shannon,

MSU Extension agent in Pontotoc County. “Our growers try to hit that July 1 date for harvest, but we don’t usually make it. With our weather, we can never get them in the ground as soon as those guys down south.”

Shannon said he is not aware of any issues with the crop as of mid-June, and he estimates that north Mississippi’s crop will hit sales outlets after July 4.

Steede said prices for the farmer are up from last year, and consumers of Mississippi watermelons can expect to pay a little more this year.

People can celebrate this year’s harvest during the popular Mississippi Watermelon Festival in Smith County.

The 45th annual Mississippi Watermelon Festival is set for July 14 and 15 in Mize. Festival events include a 5K run, food vendors, arts and crafts vendors, live music each night, and a car, truck and bike show. Gates open at 3:30 p.m. July 14 and 8:30 a.m. July 15. For admission prices and more information, visit the festival’s website at <https://mswatermelon-festival.com/>.

Opportunity to Strengthen Mississippi's Food Supply Chain

By Commissioner Andy Gipson

This is an exciting time for Mississippi agriculture. The pandemic reminded us of the importance of having a strong, resilient food supply chain and the ability to feed ourselves. I am happy to report that the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce (MDAC) has an opportunity to help strengthen our state's food supply chain which will increase marketing opportunities for our farmers and increase consumers' access to local foods.

MDAC has entered into a cooperative agreement with the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) to administer the Resilient Food Systems Infrastructure Program (RFSI) for the State of Mississippi. The purpose of this program is to assist states in building resilience in the middle-of-the-supply-chain and strengthening local food systems by creating new revenue streams for producers. The goal of the Resilient Food Systems Infrastructure Program is to create additional and better processing options for local producers across the state's food supply chain.

Through the RFSI Program, MDAC will receive funding from USDA that will be subawarded to eligible entities in the form of infrastructure grants to middle-of-the-supply businesses. Funds will support projects that expand capacity for the aggregation, processing, manufacturing, storing, transporting, wholesaling, and distribution of locally produced food. Eligible foods include specialty crops, dairy, grains for human consumption, aquaculture, and other food products. Meat and poultry, wild-caught seafood, exclusively animal feed and forage products, fiber, landscaping products, tobacco, and dietary supplements are excluded.

The Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce is currently developing a State Plan that outlines the priorities and needs of the state as well as the details on how the Department will administer a competitive grant process to award the infrastructure grants. In order to ensure that we identify the needs and set priorities that are most beneficial to producers and agribusinesses, we are seeking feedback from the public. I will be leading three stakeholder outreach listening sessions in various parts of the state so we can hear directly from you. I invite the public to join us at one of three listening sessions:

- Thursday, July 6, at 10:00 a.m. at the Marks Community House, 300 Pecan Street, Marks, MS 38646
- Tuesday, July 11, at 10:00 a.m. at the Forestry Building at the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum, 1150 Lakeland Drive,

Andy Gipson
Commissioner

Jackson, MS 39216
• Tuesday, July 18, at 10:00 a.m. at the Forrest County Extension Office, 952 Sullivan Drive Hattiesburg, Mississippi 39401

Additional listening session details and registration information can be found at the Resilient Food Systems Infrastructure Program link on our website at mdac.ms.gov. For those that can't attend the listening sessions, we value your feedback as well. Public comments can be submitted on our website.

I am looking forward to hearing from our producers and other key stakeholders as we move forward in developing and administering this program, and I am excited about the positive impacts and future opportunities that can result from expanding and strengthening our food supply system.

Commissioner Andy Gipson Addresses Local Food Opportunities and Resources Available to Consumers and Farmers

By Paige Manning
Director of Marketing and Public Relations - MDAC

On June 15, 2023, Commissioner Andy Gipson addressed local food opportunities and resources available for consumers and farmers. As Mississippi enters its peak produce season, Commissioner Gipson reminded consumers of the benefits of purchasing local foods and ways consumers can find local products.

“As I travel the state, people want to know ‘Where can I buy local food?’ I want consumers to know that Mississippi has an abundant and available local food supply that can be found across the state right now such as in farmers markets that are currently in their prime season,” said Commissioner Gipson. “We are excited about promoting farmers markets and other local food opportunities. Farmers are hardworking people, working and persevering through tough times like the pandemic and storms that we have faced, and buying from these local farms also benefits our families.”

Commissioner Gipson discussed sources of local food and five resources available through the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce (MDAC) that consumers can use to find local products:

- Shop one of Mississippi's farmers markets that can found at msfarmersmarket.com.

Farmers markets provide an opportunity for consumers to purchase local produce and other food products including meat, dairy and eggs. Over 60 farmers markets can be found throughout Mississippi. The Mississippi Farmers Market in Jackson, which is operated by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce, is open on Thursdays seasonally from 9:00 a.m. until 1:00 p.m. and on Saturdays from 8:00 a.m. until 1:00 p.m. year-round. A listing of farmers markets can be found at msfarmersmarket.com.

- Visit a local u-pick agritourism farm that can be found at msagritourism.org.

Many of the 110 agritourism operations in Mississippi include u-pick farms. These unique farms allow visitors to pick the fruits and vegetables they want. This is a great way to purchase produce that can be frozen and preserved for the future. To find an agritourism operation, visit msagritourism.org and download the Mississippi Agritourism mobile app.

- Farmers can register to sell, and consumers can buy locally from farmers at the Mississippi Farm Marketplace.

The Mississippi Farm Marketplace is an online portal developed by MDAC to connect farmers and consumers looking to purchase direct from growers. The Mississippi Farm Marketplace website allows farmers to list their available commodities for sale direct to the public, as well as labor needs on their farms through the job listings. The Mississippi Farm Marketplace is free to the public and easily accessible via computer or smart phone. Find fresh produce or advertise agricultural commodities by registering at msfarmmarketplace.com.

- Subscribe to the in-print and online bimonthly Mississippi Market Bulletin at msmarketbulletin.org

Commissioner Gipson encouraged farmers looking for market opportunities to participate in the Local Food Assistance Program. MDAC has partnered with the three Feeding America affiliated food banks to procure locally produced food, including foods purchased from socially disadvantaged farmers, and distribute this food to identified underserved communities through their networks in all 82 counties. Farmers and other food producers and processors that are interested in potentially marketing their products through this program should register their farm or business in a directory developed by MDAC at mdac.ms.gov/msfp/.

Commissioner Gipson also reminded the public that the dates of the 2023 Mississippi State Fair will be October 5-15. Entertainment acts will be announced in the upcoming days at msstatefair.com and on Mississippi State Fairgrounds' Facebook, Twitter and Instagram.

Hail, Wind Damage Batter Row Crops, Compromise Corn Yields

By Nathan Gregory
MSU Extension Service

After a June 14 severe thunderstorm dropped some of the state's largest recorded hail on Noxubee County, row-crop farmland there suffered up to 50% yield loss.

A 5-inch-diameter hailstone from the eastern Mississippi storm cell made media headlines, but reports of wind and hail damage to crops in the Mississippi Delta began rolling in as early as the previous weekend.

Row-crop specialists with the Mississippi State University Extension Service met with affected growers at MSU Extension's Noxubee County facility the morning after the severe storm to help them assess their next steps.

Of the state's three primary row crops, corn likely faced the most losses due to the later stage of its development when the storm hit. Reports of hail and wind damage were also recorded on some cotton and soybean operations, but plant recovery or ample time for replanting are more likely for those crops because they had not been growing as long as corn.

“All the corn leaves were emerged, and when a storm defoliates all those leaves right before sensitive reproductive stages, it can cause heavy yield losses,” said Erick Larson, MSU Extension corn specialist. “When your corn is already developed fully and this happens, there's not much you can do to salvage the crop. You're stuck with the damage you have.”

MSU Extension cotton specialist Brian Perialisi said his field observations varied from significant damage to total loss in some Noxubee County spots.

“A mile south of the damage, everything looks fine,” Perialisi said. “The damaged plants' survival depends on the environmental factors after the event. If the environment is conducive and you have a solid root system, the plant will bounce back, and you can make a decent late crop.”

“Because of when this happened,” he added, “there are some cotton growers who will have to decide whether to abandon their crop and file an insurance claim or sink more money into making a crop.”

MSU Extension soybean specialist Trent Irby said most damage to that crop was limited to hail. While some of the affected fields had younger soybeans, others had already reached a more mature stage of growth.

“We started getting damage reports in the second weekend of June from several Delta counties,” he said. “From the wind perspective, the soybeans are still relatively small to have any major issues, but hail has been tough on some acres, knocking off leaves completely.”

Depending on the level of damage, some soybean fields may require replanting. In others, plants will likely survive but have delayed maturity.

Noxubee is regularly a top-10 producing county in Mississippi for all three of the major row crops.
