Fall Mums Offer Big Color Splash

By MSU Extension Service

Just as the changing colors in nature signal the arrival of autumn, so do the appearance of beautiful, flowering mums at our local garden centers.

Adding fall mums, which is the short name for Chrysanthemums, is a stress-free way to provide color to the fall landscape. It's easy to see why, as these plants will produce more flowers than you could possibly count. The selection of colors seems limitless, from rustic earth tones to bright and cheery pastels.

Available sizes range from 4-inch pots all the way up to 5-gallon containers and bigger.

Choose fall mums in full flower to make an instant impact on any autumn party or event. Also, select plants that still have tight buds and are just starting to show color. This increases the time you will have a showy display as the buds begin to open in the garden.

Always place your mums in a spot that receives full sun. This will ensure the absolute best flowering. Never let your fall mums wilt. This is the quickest way to end the flowering show, as the plants are slow to recover from getting too dry.

A favorite way to use fall mums is in containers on the front porch. Select a large plant and simply place the plant, container and all, into a beautiful, decorative pot. You don't need to remove and replant from the original container to make this beautiful display.

Fall mums can be transplanted into the garden to fill in gaps that occur when our summer color starts to fade. It's a good idea to plant them in raised beds to aid drainage. Amend the soil with good compost and use slow release fertilizer for good nutrition through the fall season.

Many gardeners, treat fall mums as annual plants, replacing them when the flowers fade with the next season's plants. If you are growing fall mums in containers, you can transplant them to the garden after the flowers begin to fade. Sometimes the plants will overwinter in the ground.

Keep in mind that many fall mums are not winter hardy, even in Mississippi. Many have been selected strictly for color performance.

If you want to try to overwinter your fall mums, here are some tips for success. Prune the foliage down after the stems have died back. Cover the plant with a 3- to 4-inch layer of pine straw. Water well in the spring and keep a lookout for new green shoots to appear.

Adding fall mums is a stress-free way to provide color to the fall landscape, and the selection of colors can seem limitless.

Foreign Purchase of Farmland Study Committee Holds Second Meeting

By Emma Dotson
Public Relations Specialist - MDAC

The Study Committee on Foreign Purchase of Farmland in Mississippi held its second meeting at the State Capitol on September 27. The Mississippi Legislature created this Study Committee through House Bill 280, 2023 Legislative Session, for the purpose of studying the purchasing, acquiring, leasing or holding an interest in agricultural land by foreign governments.

“A great deal of what I do these days is listening and talking to people, and I can tell the sentiment of the people of Mississippi is that this is a major issue that needs to be addressed,” said Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce Andy Gipson. “There’s nothing I talk about that gets more of a response from the people of this state than this issue. Something as simple as keeping American agriculture, American.”

The Study Committee welcomed Staff Attorney Micah Brown of the National Agriculture Law Center (NALC) to its second meeting as a presenter. The NALC is a non-partisan source of objective, scholarly and authoritative agricultural and food law research and information. In his presentation, Brown highlighted Southern state laws and regulations relating to foreign land ownership.

The next meeting for the Committee will be October 19, 2023, in Room 113 in the Capitol.

Visit www.mdac.ms.gov/farmland for more information about the Study Committee including meeting proceedings and USDA foreign ownership information. Public comments are welcome via email and can be

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Methods Exist To Control Nuisance Beavers on Land

By Bonnie Coblenz
MSU Extension Service

Shortly after Emily Duggar bought property in Madison County to build a house near Canton, she realized there were beavers on a creek that ran through the back of the property.

"We saw evidence that beavers were taking down trees and gnawing on trees," Duggar said. "We could see they were building a dam, and they've since built two more dams."

"The water is rising," she said. "We haven't had any flooding yet, but we've heard that some people who live in the neighborhoods behind our property have flooding from the creek."

Duggar contacted the Mississippi State University Extension Service for advice. Ideally, she would like to coexist with the beavers, but not if it causes damage to nearby properties.

James Callicutt, an MSU Extension associate with expertise in waterfowl and wetlands ecology, said beavers are frequently a nuisance around people, but they can perform a valuable function in ecosystems.

"The problem with beavers can be the floodwaters from the dams they construct or that they damage or cut down trees that we value," Callicutt said.

Beavers eat a lot of aquatic plants and the cambium of trees, which is the layer just below the bark. They have large and very strong front teeth that grow constantly. They chew down trees for building material for their dams and sometimes simply to keep their teeth sharpened and the right length.

"While they can cause unwanted flooding by blocking drainage, beaver dams do create important habitat for themselves and waterfowl, amphibians and other animals that are wetland-dependent," he said. "If these are things you're interested in, beavers can be a positive on your property."

While humans and beavers can peacefully coexist, many times the interaction leaves landowners unhappy. Beavers are the largest rodent in North America. In Mississippi, the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks has classified them as a nuisance.

"You start with trying to get rid of the beavers, and then you remove the dams," Callicutt said. "An aggressive trapping program is probably the best way to start, then dam removal is necessary to remove the water from the area."

"You can often remove small dams with rakes and shovels, but large ones require big equipment and sometimes explosives," he said.

Callicutt said shooting the beavers can be effective, but it requires diligence and long nights spent hunting in the dark. Beavers don't live alone, so killing one will not solve the problem. Traps are more effective because they can be placed on heavily used paths and monitored frequently.

"The most common trap is a conibear or body grip trap that is quick and lethal," he said. "Because conibear or snares are mostly used near beaver slides or runs and use castor as a lure, they are not typically bothered by dogs or cats."

There are some non-lethal methods to address the problems beavers cause. Callicutt said prevention and exclusion techniques include wrapping metal fencing around tree trunks or placing guards on the ends of drainage pipes.

Russ Walsh with the Wildlife Bureau of the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks, said not every beaver is a nuisance, but when they are, they can be hunted, trapped, taken, killed, chased or pursued year-round on private lands.

"Nuisance animal regulations provide the opportunity for homeowners and landowners to protect their property against nuisance animals and the damage that they may cause," Walsh said.

When it is necessary to remove beavers, landowners should start with information from MDWFP. Landowners who are residents of Mississippi do not need a permit to trap or hunt beavers on land titled in their name, but others do.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture Wildlife Services, a federal agency with responsibilities related to wildlife damage management issues, can also provide assistance. # Fall Hummingbird Migration

By Dr. Eddie Miles Louis Smith
MSU Extension Service

The fall hummingbird migration is a truly awe-inspiring natural event that captivates bird enthusiasts and nature lovers alike. These tiny, jewel-toned birds embark on an epic journey that covers thousands of miles, from their breeding grounds in North America to their wintering grounds in Central and South America.

The journey is fraught with peril, and the hummingbirds must overcome numerous challenges, including extreme weather conditions, hunger, and exhaustion. To prepare for the journey, they undergo an extraordinary transformation, bulking up on nectar and insects until they double their body weight. They also store extra energy in their muscles, allowing them to fly for hours on end without stopping.

Despite their small size, hummingbirds are remarkable navigators, using a combination of celestial cues, magnetic fields, and landmarks to find their way. They also possess an incredible memory, allowing them to remember the locations of food sources along their route.

As the migration progresses, hummingbirds can be seen in a variety of habitats, from coastal areas to mountain ranges. Birdwatchers can catch a glimpse of these magnificent creatures during their journey by setting up hummingbird feeders or visiting areas where they are known to congregate.

One of the best ways to attract hummingbirds to your garden is by planting flowers that they love. There are many plants that are great for hummingbirds, including bee balm, cardinal flower, and salvia. These plants have brightly colored flowers that are rich in nectar, which is the main source of food for hummingbirds. By planting these flowers, you can create a beautiful and welcoming environment for these amazing birds, and help to support their population in your area. So if you want to attract hummingbirds to your garden, be sure to plant plenty of flowers that they love!

Overall, the fall hummingbird migration is a testament to the resilience and adaptability of these amazing birds. It is a stunning display of nature's wonders and a reminder of the incredible diversity and beauty of the natural world.
