Soybean, Peanut Acreage Exceeds Early Forecasts Cotton Tumbles

By Robert Nathan Gregory
MSU Extension Service

Cotton and corn acreage in Mississippi are more than 30% below March projections, while growers of soybeans and peanuts planted much more than initially forecasted.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture National Agricultural Statistics Service released a report at the end of June updating the amount of crop acreage planted statewide. It compared those amounts to how much growers said they would plant when surveyed before planting season. Rice and hay acreage are unchanged from the USDA projection report published in March.

520,000 acres, down 160,000 acres from March planting intentions. Corn acreage is also down, with 550,000 acres planted instead of the initially projected 710,000.

Many acres initially set aside for corn was planted in soybeans, with an estimated 2 million acres of that crop planted. That amount is 150,000 more acres than forecasts indicated four months ago and up 340,000 acres from last year.

"There were several factors that led to our soybean acreage increase," said Trent Irby, soybean specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service. "Weather issues that knocked out a fair number of intended corn acres and falling commodity prices of other crops both contributed to more soybean acres in 2020.

"Also, the 2019 soybean report reflected the significant acreage that was left unplanted due to flooding in the Mississippi Delta, so many of those acres were put back into soybeans in 2020," he said.

MSU Extension cotton specialist Brian Perialisi and agricultural economist Will Maples pointed to market issues as the leading reason for growers backing off from planting as much cotton.

"I do not think this reduction can be blamed on environmental conditions because most of the state experienced above average planting conditions," Perialisi said. "Cotton production is expensive, and that, coupled with bearish market conditions, resulted in fewer planted acres. As prices fell below 60 cents, producers had a more difficult time penciling in a profit, especially if planting outside the optimum planting window in early May."

From an economic perspective, Maples suggested the impact of COVID-19 on the overall economy as another factor for reduced cotton acreage. He attributed concerns of excess supply to the scaling back of corn planting.

"These effects had a severe negative impact on the cotton market," he said. "The fundamentals are showing a high level of cotton stocks and decreased demand with the shutdown of economies worldwide. These factors have kept cotton prices down and probably convinced many producers to change their decisions to plant cotton this year.

"Nationally, the March corn acreage numbers were near a record high and signaled a potentially record corn supply," Maples added. "The market reacted with low prices and convinced some producers to rethink planting corn. That is especially true for the Midwest."

Extension corn and wheat specialist Erick Larson said decreased corn acreage was weather driven.

"Mississippi growers were unable to plant corn because relentless rainfall drastically restricted planting operations throughout prime planting time in March and April for most of the crop-growing regions in Mississippi," he said. "There were only a few, sporadic days through the spring when well-drained fields dried enough to allow tractors a chance to get in fields to plant.

"Many growers abandoned a considerable portion of their corn planting intentions before a suitable planting window of opportunity finally occurred in the last few days of April and first week of May," Larson said.

Mississippi winter wheat acreage remains at historically low levels at 40,000 acres, down 5,000 from March estimates.

"Record rainfall during the first quarter of 2020 limited wheat productivity and may have caused some acres to be abandoned prior to harvest this spring," Larson said.

Peanut-planted acres are estimated at 25,000, which is up 5,000 acres both from 2019 and from March planting intentions.

"I would attribute a majority of the increased peanut acreage this year to markets," said Brendan Zurweller, MSU Extension peanut specialist. "Most peanut producers are also cotton producers. The potential profit margin based on price received has been more favorable for peanuts when compared to cotton. This has resulted in many peanut and cotton growers pushing their rotations towards peanuts as much as they can."

Rice planting is unchanged from March estimates at 150,000 acres. Expected hay harvest is about 620,000 acres.

Commissioner Andy Gipson Provides Guidance to Recipients of Unsolicited Seeds

By Hannah East
Marketing Specialist - MDAC

Mississippi Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce Andy Gipson instructs anyone receiving packages of unsolicited seeds from China, or any foreign country, in recent days to immediately contact the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce's Bureau of Plant Industry by phoning (662) 325-3390.

Those receiving the seeds are instructed to hold onto the seeds and packaging, including the mailing label, until someone from MDAC's Bureau of Plant Industry contacts you with further instructions or residents can drop off the seeds at the Mississippi State University (MSU) Extension Office located in their county. To find an MSU Extension Office near you visit www.extension.msstate.edu/county-offices.

"We are aware that citizens in Mississippi, as well as other states, have received unsolicited packages of seed appearing to be from China and other countries. We are working closely with the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service on this issue. If you have received these seeds, please call the Bureau of Plant Industry, and we will send an inspector to your location to pick up the seeds from you. Please don't plant the seeds. I don't want to scare people because there is no indication these seeds pose a danger to human health. But any foreign seeds can have a negative impact on our environment as a threat to plant and animal health, and to agriculture. Also, foreign seeds could carry fungi or pests which could cause great destruction to our native ecosystem. So, I can't stress enough the importance of contacting our office regarding this matter. Your assistance will help us to prevent the unlawful entry of prohibited seeds into the country and protect against invasive pests and noxious weeds," said Commissioner Gipson.

At this time, the USDA does not have any evidence indicating this is something other than a "brushing scam" where people receive unsolicited items from a seller who then posts false customer reviews to boost sales. That scam can involve many different random products, but foreign seeds could be an environmental threat. USDA is currently collecting seed packages from recipients and will test their contents and determine if they contain anything that could be of concern to U.S. agriculture or the environment.

'LIVE & In-Person' Master Gardener Training Opportunity

If you like to garden and don't mind community service work, then consider becoming a Master Gardener. The Mississippi State University - Extension Service (MSU-ES) is offering a training class to residents in Madison, Hinds and Rankin counties this summer. The Master Gardener Training program covers many plant topics. The 40-hour training will run from Aug. 11-Sept. 10, every Tuesday and Thursday from 9-11 p.m. The classroom style lectures (No Virtual or ZOOM) will be held in the large assembly room at the Rankin County Extension Office, 601 Marquette Rd. in Brandon.

To register for the class, you should have some basic plant knowledge, a genuine interest in learning more and a firm commitment to return 40 hours of volunteer service to the Extension Service within one year after completion. You must attend 80% of the training sessions to be eligible for Master Gardener status. The training costs $150 per person and registration opens July 1. The monetary fee and associated paperwork deadline is July 31. The class size is 35; but could change due to CDC guidelines. Applications will be numbered as the paperwork & check come in. This is how we will determine who gets in if we must decrease the number of participants.

Genuine MS® Tufline “Well-Built Performance-Driven Implements”

By Lane Milton
Genuine MS Brand Manager
Market Development Division - MDAC

Monroe Tufline has designed and manufactured a complete line of tillage and dirt working equipment since the company's founding in 1958. Monroe Tufline Manufacturing Company was founded by brothers, Joseph S. Perkins and J.C. Perkins, in Columbus, Mississippi, with the purpose of building quality farm equipment.

Joe and J.C. had both worked in another farm implement business before becoming the first two employees of Monroe Manufacturing, which was in a small garage on “river hill” in Columbus, near the Tombigbee River. The name Monroe Manufacturing was chosen due to their first customer located in neighboring Monroe County. There was another company named Monroe Manufacturing, hence the name Tufline was created by Joe Perkins and added to Monroe.

He said “Tufline” meant a tough line of equipment. Monroe Tufline operated on Highway 82 west of town for a few years until moving in 1964 to the present location on 2219

Tufline Lane, just off Highway 45 North in Columbus.

Many building additions and product additions occurred over the years as the business grew into three major specialty implement lines: agricultural, landscape and sportsman. The Monroe Mister-Sprayer was among one of the first products produced, as were three-point disc harrows. This has been a primary product for many years until new products were added in the early 1980s. Landscaping product line growth included: box-blades and grader-blades.

In the 1990s, Tufline's Sportsman line of products was introduced which included disc harrows, box blades, landscape rakes and pull type spreaders all designed to be pulled with all-terrain vehicles. These implements are designed with the same principles of quality that are put into tractor implements which make them the toughest line of ATV implements on the market.

Tufline's Specialty Equipment Line includes sub-soilers, v-plows, disc-plows, row-disc, pasture renovators and culti-packers. The latest additions to Tufline's product offering include wheeled box-scrapers, vertical-tillage implements, rotary tillers and hay rakes.

These products are ideal for game-plot development, small gardens, farming operations and many other applications at home, the ranch and the farm.

Tufline is proud of our product line and strive to provide the best equipment for farmers, ranchers and the gaming industries. We provide “well-built performance driven implements” and that is why we keep this our motto.

Peppers Withstand Heat and Humidity

MSU Extension Service

Much of my vegetable garden is a distant memory due to the summer heat and humidity. But I'm always encouraged by the production I enjoy from my pepper plants.

I marvel at the way these plants seem to laugh at the heat and produce fresh peppers all the way to frost in the fall.

There really isn't anything better than picking fresh peppers from my home garden. I guess that's true for all of our garden vegetables.

The options for growing peppers are endless. I personally grow a wide variety, ranging from sweet to rather spicy peppers. I used to grow and enjoy the weapons-grade, super-hot varieties like Ghost, Trinidad Scorpion and Carolina Reaper, but I guess I've gotten smarter as I've gotten older.

I watch the cooking shows looking for ideas not only for recipes but also for new, trendy vegetables to grow.

This year, I'm growing a superb group of peppers that are changing my thoughts about an already versatile fruit. Yes, a fruit. Although its classified as a vegetable, a pepper contains seeds, making it a fruit.

A fun little pepper I'm growing for the first time is the biquinho red, commonly called Brazilian Little Beak. This small pepper has a pointed shape that starts out pale yellow and transitions to bright red. It has a mild heat profile that I enjoy pickled and used as a playful garnish.

A popular pepper to grow is the Fresno pepper.

Taste-wise, a Fresno is similar to a jalapeño, but it has a smoky flavor note to me. The peppers are 2 to 3 inches long and about an inch in diameter. As they transition from glossy green to bright red, they tend to increase in heat level. The peppers are cone-shaped, and many will be slightly curve.

Another popular pepper I'm growing is the shishito. This is an old Asian variety that is thin-skinned and about 3 inches long. Shishito peppers are mild, but one in 10 is randomly hot and can be a pleasant surprise. I first enjoyed these peppers at Chef Morimoto's restaurant in Orlando, where they were flash fried. The wrinkly skin made them perfect for holding onto the peanut dipping sauce.

I'm growing an improved shishito hybrid called Mellow Star. This is a shishito crossed with sweet red pepper that is deliciously mild and sweet. I like to wait until these peppers display their bright, glossy skin before harvesting.

One of the best peppers I continue to grow in my home garden is Giant Marconi.

This is an elongated, Italian sweet pepper selection that tastes great with no heat. It produces up to 8-inch-long fruit that have a smoky flavor without the need for the grill. I think they taste best when fully bright red.

Giant Marconi is an All-America Selection winner that produces strongly through the heat and humidity of our Mississippi summers.

It's too late to start from seed this season, but I've noticed that garden centers have a nice supply of transplants that will still bear a late-season pepper crop.

The 2020 Census: Numbers Matter More Than Ever

By Britney N. Mack
Marketing & Communications
Specialist - MDAC

I think we all can agree on one thing: 2020 has been a trying year for everyone. As many of us get acclimated to a “new normal” of physical distancing, wearing protective masks and gloves, paying a premium for hand sanitizer, and washing our hands more frequently (for 20 seconds or longer is the stated recommendation by health officials), we have watched the world around us change in so many facets.

It is only August, yet this year has already included several layoffs and permanent business closures. With the uncertainty that lies ahead, the very least we can do as Mississippi residents is complete the 2020 census. During a difficult time like this, it is crucial that we get an accurate count of how many people are living in the state. This is the only way that we will have fair access to any federal assistance, programs, and other resources allotted to promote economic growth and stability in our state.

Completing the United States Census is free, quick, and easy. The questionnaire, which is offered every ten years nationwide, typically asks respondents about the people in their homes or their group living situations. Ultimately, the aim is to count everyone only once based on where they live. With this gathered data, businesses can determine where to purchase or rent real estate to meet the needs of their target markets and the federal government can appropriately designate the number of seats for each state in the House of Representatives and can redraw legislative districts, as needed. State and local governments can make better decisions about new or existing infrastructure and public service projects—roads, bridges, schools, hospitals, etc. So many decisions (and opportunities) are based on these numbers alone.

Since Mississippi consists of several rural areas and agricultural communities with limited resources, career opportunities, and amenities—Internet connectivity typically being one—it is pivotal that those residing in these areas take the necessary courses of action to complete the census. When those residing in these rural and agricultural areas complete the census, it increases the probability of some form of progress in communities where many people are both socially and economically marginalized—their zip code being a contributing factor. People living in rural communities are not always easily accessible—usually because of ambiguous or unassigned addresses or difficult terrains or unclear passages to their residences. Furthermore, the U.S. Census Bureau does not mail censuses to post office boxes.

If you have not completed the census already, you can easily utilize the 24/7 online option and submit your data electronically. If you do not have a computer, tablet, or smartphone with Internet access, you can make arrangements to visit a local library or a friend, relative, or neighbor who does. Door-knocking interviewers will begin visiting households across the nation on August 11.

Whether you complete the census online, via postal mail, by phone, or in-person with an interviewer, please do so accurately. Remember: all identifiable information in your census is protected under Title 13 of the U.S. Code, and even law enforcement is unable to use any of your submitted information against you.

Respond now by mailing in the paper form, calling 844-330-2020 or submitting data online at www.2020census.gov.
