Mississippi Agritourism and the Great Outdoors During COVID-19

By Donna West, Division Director
Market Development – MDAC

Sheltering in place, quarantining, social distancing, six feet apart, teleworking, thinning the halls, virtual learning, drive-by birthday parties, drive-thru shopping, new normal and Zoom meetings. These are words, expressions and jargons that describe life as we are living it these strange and scary days. And, who knew face masks would become the most important fashion accessory of 2020, and the aroma of hand sanitizers would turn out to be the new universal fragrance of women and men alike?

Of course, these examples of said expressions apply only to corporations, retail and hospitality establishments, schools and sports events...right? Well, no.

Agritourism operators across Mississippi have had to take this cornucopia of COVID-19 terminologies and convert them into everyday practices on their farms.

"Many agritourism facilities have the benefit of being outdoors, which allows for safer participation and increased social distancing. Fortunately, anyone in agriculture knows the necessity of washing hands and making healthy decisions in the raising of produce or livestock. So many agritourism experiences are an extension of those lessons many of us learned on the farm," said Agriculture and Commerce Commissioner Andy Gipson. He continued, "Certainly, the loss of school field trips is a huge impact; but, agriculture weathers many storms, and so I hope when this viral challenge is overcome, that our agritourism businesses will likewise recover and continue their fun, educational, and healthy services."

Just as many traditional businesses have had to temporarily shut down, cancel or postpone events, so have Agritourism venues across the state.

For instance, Lazy Acres Farm, a Christmas Tree farm in Chunky,

Miss., also offers spring and fall fun events. As the coronavirus initially appeared across the nation in the early spring, Michael and Cathy May had to reassess the upcoming Bunny Patch and Easter egg hunt, eventually cancelling it completely. Because Lazy Acres Farm encompasses over 40 acres of fun and plenty of space for social distancing, the May family plan on opening their pumpkin patch to the public this fall and are preparing for the Christmas season.

Eubanks Produce Farms, family owned and operated, offers Charlie's U-Pick operations at both their Lucedale and Wiggins, MS locations in the spring and summer. Because u-picks are able to provide built-in social distancing, Charlie's U-Pick had increased traffic at both locations. "We also had a good response to the drive-thru mixed boxes we offered Mid-April through Mid-May before the u-pick crops were ready," said Janice Eubanks.

The Eubanks also increased their sanitation stations, implemented temperature checks daily for employees, asked employees not to come to work if they were ill or had family members who were ill, required masks for cashiers and customer assistance positions. Added Janice Eubanks, "We adjusted the checkout area to allow separation of people purchasing produce and because our locations are open air tents, we felt this was an extra advantage for us as well."

Many of the fall agritourism operations and Christmas tree farms are geared toward families; however, in September and October, these venues and operators rely heavily on school field trips. The sound of children of all ages laughing and playing en masse will be sorely missed this season. "We will not have any school field trips this fall and that is a tremendous amount of our business," said Jo Lynn Mitchell, co-owner of Mitchell Farms in Collins, Miss.

The Mitchells have put safety protocols in place and will have face masks for both children and adults available and have installed eighteen hand sanitizing stations throughout the property. "We plan to open, if possible, with a small staff on the weekends, and since we are an outdoor venue, I believe families will enjoy getting out and playing in the sunshine safely and responsibly," remarked Mitchell.

The Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum, located in Jackson, Miss., is open year-round. Encompassing 39 acres, its many settings, 22 exhibits and seven annual events recount Mississippi's agriculture throughout the years. Due to COVID-19, the Ag Museum was closed to the public for three months and is now operating at half capacity per Governor Tate Reeves mandates.

"In opening, we have encouraged social distancing and mask wearing, along with daily sanitizing of high traffic areas," said Hayes Patrick, Museum Director. Where many educational events have been onsite, some are being offered as virtual experiences, such as the Science Fest in September. Added Patrick, "Coming up, we have the Pumpkin Adventure, Harvest Fest and Homestead for the Holidays. We will have these events just as in the past but will make any adjustments required by mandates."

On March 24, 2020, Mississippi Governor Tate Reeves signed Mississippi Executive Order 1463 which considers agriculture, farms and farmers markets as an "essential business or operation." Since most agritourism venues are on working farms and designed for the great outdoors, your Mississippi agritourism industry continues to welcome each and everyone to responsibly and safely discover and explore the hospitality state's many agritourism sites.

Commissioner's Policy Corner

Broadcast Mississippi's Best Public Education!

By Andy Gipson
Commissioner

As the father of four school age children in rural Mississippi, I would like to propose a common-sense enhancement to COVID era education. My proposal won't cost hundreds of millions of dollars; it won't take decades to implement; and it will provide an immediate workable solution for our teachers, students and parents. Put simply, my proposal is to Broadcast Mississippi's Best Education. We can do it starting tomorrow at virtually no cost to taxpayers. How? Broadcast our best teachers over the public digital television infrastructure already accessible by every Mississippi home.

We enjoy living on our farm in rural Mississippi, but like most rural Mississippians, we don't have access to high speed broadband internet. We did the best we could during the spring COVID semester, but internet-based distance learning is not realistic for most folks like us in rural Mississippi. We found that our children were more frustrated attempting to "zoom" and getting knocked off the internet. Homework was lost in transmission adding to the stress. Without the infrastructure, online learning just cannot work this far out in the country, even if every child were to have an iPad or other digital device. That's why as your Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce, I strongly support every available method of deploying high speed broadband in the rural areas of Mississippi. I fully support more and faster broadband out here in the country, and I appreciate the Legislature and the Mississippi Public Service Commission's initiatives in this regard.

But what we need is a comprehensive statewide educational digital broadcast plan as we transition to rural broadband statewide. Out here in rural Mississippi, we can't wait for years or decades for our children to get high speed internet. Our children will be grown by then. Our kids need access to quality education at home, statewide, right now. We've seen entire school classes and grades sent home for quarantine and we know this is likely to continue. Parents, teachers and students are facing tremendous stress and uncertainty as students are sent home for weeks at a time, during this COVID pandemic. Many parents have decided to homeschool for the first time. These are just some of the reasons I am proposing to Broadcast Mississippi's Best Education - starting right now.

As an immediate educational response to COVID-19, I support a partnership between Mississippi Public Broadcasting (MPB) and the Mississippi Department of Education (MDE) to devote a 24/7 educational digital television and radio channel that would include daily instruction by a rotation of Mississippi's very best K-12 teachers by grade, and every basic educational subject. I've already personally confirmed this is possible with the leadership of both MPB and MDE.

Students and parents could tune in with a set daily routine of instruction. This program would reach every household in Mississippi - no matter how rural or urban. For those distance learning through the local schools, assignments and homework would be turned in and graded by a child's local teachers, so students would continue getting direct input from the teachers and local school districts who know the student's personal needs. Those on quarantine or choosing to homeschool their children would have a daily routine of consistent instruction, as well as providing new opportunities to reinforce studies for the children attending in person.

The pedagogy and curriculum can be crafted by the experts. But my vision is that every weekday, each grade has several short lessons with corresponding assignments, followed by the next grade level, and the next. This certainly wouldn't replace in-room instruction but could supplement those at home wanting to advance and not fall behind. For those that do have access to high speed internet, all the lessons could be archived and enhanced with downloadable materials. It isn't a perfect plan; but we should never let the perfect be the enemy of the good.

This simple idea - Broadcast Mississippi's Best Education - could reach every home and every child in Mississippi with a digital TV antenna, cable TV or radio, at practically no cost to taxpayers. And it can be archived and utilized via the internet, as well. We already have the infrastructure, and I am certain our best teachers across the state would gladly step up to participate.

Andy Gipson

Just as important, this concept has the potential to present a complete paradigm shift for Mississippi's future. Even in normal times, this broadcast would be the perfect opportunity to reinforce learning for every Mississippi child attending school. Our children deserve the best education they can receive, whether attending in person, distance learning, or home schooling. Let's get this done for all of Mississippi's children.

Maple Apple Pork Medallions

1 1/2 cups apple cider or 100% apple juice
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1/4 cup pure maple syrup
2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
2 teaspoons stone-ground mustard
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

Commissioner Andy Gipson Announces MDAC's New Wild Hog Control Program

By Andy Gipson
Commissioner

On August 27, 2020, I announced a new Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce (MDAC) program, the Wild Hog Control Program (WHCP). Commissioner Gipson was joined by Mississippi House of Representatives Agriculture Chairman Bill Pigott, Mississippi State Senate Agriculture Chairman Charles Younger, and Mike McCormick, President of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation.

We are excited to launch the first-of-its-kind state agriculture department-led invasive feral hog trapping initiative, said Commissioner Gipson. After a full year of public education, research and outreach through the Commissioner's Wild Hog Challenge, MDAC is launching the Wild Hog Control Program, which will provide farmers, ranchers and landowners with the resources and training necessary to effectively combat the rise of destructive wild hogs in Mississippi.

During the 2020 Legislative Session, MDAC was authorized to operate programs to fight nuisance wildlife species on private agricultural and forestry lands. The WHCP will involve the coordinated trapping and control of feral hogs on private farm and timber land throughout Mississippi. Working at the request of local farmers, this program will include training and technical assistance for farmers on the most effective methods to trap and control destructive wild hogs on their farm. Following training, one or more WHCP "smart" trapping systems may be set up on the farm, and farmers, or their designees, will be trained on the remote monitoring methods and best practices for effective trapping.

In Mississippi alone, wild hogs cause more than $60 million in damages annually. As I've said many times, we already know the problem and now we are taking meaningful action to curb the invasion of hogs on farmlands. The WHCP will fight the scourge of wild hogs on behalf of Mississippi farmers and ranchers. I want to thank Mike McCormick and the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation for their indispensable support, and I want to thank Representative Pigott, Senator Younger and the entire Mississippi legislature for their support in this endeavor, said Commissioner Gipson.

MDAC acquired the first set of "smart" traps in August 2020, and currently these traps are being used in a 30-day test period in southwest Mississippi. The traps are powered by Mississippi-based HogEye Camera Systems which allow for remote trapping capability wherever there is cellular signal. Once the test phase is completed, MDAC will open an application period in late September for farmers to submit trap-use applications. Submitted applications will be ranked Commissioner Andy Gipson announced a new MDAC program, the Wild Hog Control Program, which will provide farmers, ranchers and landowners with the resources and training necessary to effectively combat the rise of destructive wild hogs in Mississippi.

based on number of acres available for trapping and historical agricultural losses caused by wild hogs on the property. Rotation of traps will occur approximately every 30-60 days, depending on use and success. MDAC will collect and analyze data including trap locations, program effectiveness and number of wild hogs harvested.

The Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation provided key support to the program with the acquisition of additional traps that will be deployed across the state. "Feral hogs continue to cause tremendous damage to ag land across all regions of Mississippi. We are proud to support MDAC's effort to offer assistance to private landowners. I believe intensive trapping is necessary to truly suppress feral hog populations," Mike McCormick, President of the Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation.

MDAC will continue to work with state and federal partners such as the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries, and Parks; USDA APHIS Wildlife Services; and Mississippi State University. These partners are vital in determining where nuisance wildlife management is needed the most across the state, with agricultural damage having the highest priority.
