Blueberry Crop May See Effects of Cold, Wet Weather

By Susan Collins-Smith
MSU Extension Service

Mississippi's recent bout of bad weather came at a critical time for producers of blueberries, the state's largest commercial fruit crop.

Blueberries can be easily damaged by cold weather, but the timing of mid-February's icy weather limited the potential damage.

"Fortunately, most blueberry flower buds were still tight, which reduced damage," said Eric Stafne, fruit and nut specialist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service. "This was especially true of rabbiteye varieties, which is the most common type grown in Mississippi. Some early southern highbush varieties had open or exposed flowers and were damaged by the cold."

Cold damage, which can be difficult to mitigate in blueberry crops, can reduce yield and berry size. Rabbiteye blueberries with their tightly closed buds can withstand temperatures as low as 21 degrees. However, open or partially open buds are damaged at temperatures between 25 and 29 degrees.

"Most blueberries are grown in south Mississippi, so temperatures were not quite as low as in other areas of the state, and we don't grow a lot of the southern highbush varieties, so the overall impact from the cold event was minor," Stafne said. "However, if it had been a week later, we would have had more trouble."

The arrival of spring storms and heavy rains may put a damper on pollination and increase the potential for disease onset.

"During periods of rain, bees don't fly as much and don't move pollen," Stafne said. "And wet pollen is more difficult to transport. Rain also can help usher in diseases, such as Botrytis, that can affect the blueberry blooms. This is especially true if the blooms have been injured by cold."

Mississippi's blueberry industry is holding steady with a shift to favor local and regional fresh markets rather than national and global frozen markets.

"Several years ago, it was easier for our co-ops to enter the frozen market," Stafne said. "However, consumer demand has changed, and other places have flooded the frozen market with those in-demand varieties that we don't grow a lot of. Other factors also influenced this shift, including government regulations, availability of labor, aging out of growers and other things."

While growing commercial blueberries for a global or naas a nutritional powerhouse. Blueberries are high in antioxidants, fiber, and vitamins and minerals, including Vitamin C, potassium and folate.

"Adding more fruit to your diet will increase your fiber intake and can help reduce the risk of chronic health conditions, such as heart disease," said Qula Madkin, Extension nutrition educator and registered dietitian. "Blueberries are often associated with desserts, but they are very versatile. Try them in salads, paired with yogurt or cheese and frozen for a quick, cool summer treat."

For more healthy snack ideas and recipes using blueberries, read Extension Publication 3568, "Healthy Snacks for Kids on the Go or at Home," and Extension Publication 3522, "HappyHealthy Blueberries Newsletter."

tional market is tough right now, Stafne said people who want to grow berries for the local fresh market have a lot of opportunity.

Part of the reason for that opportunity is the popularity of blueberries and their reputation

Worker Shortages Threaten Commerce, Supply and Distribution Chains

By Andy Gipson
Mississippi Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce

For over a year, supply and distribution chains in America have been adversely affected by COVID-19 and the related workforce shutdowns. Initially last spring, government mandates driven by the virus and by CDC recommendations forced many people other than those deemed "essential workers" to stay home from their jobs. For some, work could continue remotely as workers, teachers and students adapted to virtual classrooms and other technology-based methodologies. But for the bulk of the workforce and the public relying on manufactured and processed products, these shutdowns had an immediately noticeable impact in temporarily interrupting manufacturing and distribution systems across the country, and even around the world.

I can give you one real-life example from the Mississippi State Fairgrounds. In 2020, the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce made the decision to continue working during pandemic restrictions, including the completion of the new Mississippi Trade Mart and Coliseum renovations. As the new Trade Mart was nearing completion, the contractor was faced with major backlogs in supplies from manufacturers across America – manufacturers who had halted or slowed operations. The dividing doors for the new Trade Mart being manufactured in another state were delayed six weeks, thus delaying the entire project. But this was only a small symptom of a much broader crisis.

International trade halted or slowed. Manufacturing and food processing facilities shut down or scaled back as workers were forced home. Prices increased dramatically due to temporary shortages in products such as ground beef, coupled with higher demand. Lumber prices climbed exponentially as sawmills could not keep up with demand of the home improvement sector. Thankfully, most of these issues were only temporary as employers and workers adapted to find ways to keep plants open during the pandemic and eventually caught up with consumer demand.

But as a lingering effect of COVID-19, I believe there remains a far greater and perhaps more significant long-term threat. Since last spring, governors across America's 50 states have taken vastly different approaches in terms of "reopening" states as the threat of COVID-19 has dissipated. Some states such as California, New Mexico and

New York have insisted on essential perpetual shutdowns of large portions of their manufacturing and economic sector. Meanwhile, states such as Mississippi, Texas and Florida have successfully reopened nearly completely, and employers are hiring. The problem is, in both sets of states, employers are faced with a seemingly insurmountable problem: the lack of a once existing robust workforce that is willing to return to work.

People are choosing to stay home because the federal government adopted stimulus and unemployment policies making it more profitable for some people NOT to work for a lengthy period of time. Many people ask the question: "Why work when the government will pay me to stay home?" And so, jobs are not being filled. Factories are not operating at capacity. Slaughterhouses and food processing plants are not keeping up with demand. In America right now, there is a shortage of pork products– not because of COVID, but because of a shortage of workers.

The agriculture sector has faced a shortage of skilled laborers for many years, and this is an issue my office has been working on since 2019. But the issue now is much broader and impacts all of us. Try to purchase a piece of manufactured equipment right now or parts to make a repair; chances are that delivery is severely delayed. There is a shortage of cashiers in grocery stores and other retail outlets, causing long lines and extreme wait times. Restaurants cannot serve at full capacity due to a shortage of staff. Cattle producers are experiencing delays in having livestock processed for consumption because there is a waitlist at the processor due to high demand and fewer workers.

If Americans in all 50 states are not soon motivated to return to work, and if the incentives NOT to work are not removed, we could see the temporary shortages of the COVID Spring of 2020 repeat themselves in construction, manufacturing and transportation, as well as food production, processing and distribution at grocery stores, restaurants and ultimately, at our dinner tables.

America, let's all get back to work.

From Our Kitchen To Yours

Blueberry Sweets & Treats

Blueberry Buttermilk Breakfast Scones

- 1/2 cup blueberries
- 3/4 cup and 2 tablespoons buttermilk
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons orange zest
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/8 teaspoon table salt
- 3 1/2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/3 cup cold butter, cut into pieces
- 1 tablespoon milk

Soak blueberries in buttermilk for 5 minutes. Whisk together the flour, next 4 ingredients and 2 tablespoons of the sugar. Cut in the butter with a pastry blender until the mixture is crumbly. Gradually add the blueberries and buttermilk, stirring just until dry ingredients are moistened. Turn the dough out onto a lightly floured surface and knead lightly 2-3 times. Pat dough into a circle, about 3/4 inch thick, then cut into 8 wedges with a floured knife. Separate the wedges, and place on baking sheet. Brush the scones with milk, and sprinkle with the remaining 1 1/2 tablespoons sugar. Bake at 425° for 16-18 minutes or until lightly browned. Source: SouthernLiving.com.

Pull-Apart Blueberry Bread Pudding

- 1 (12 count) package slider buns
- 3/4 cup whole milk
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 3 large eggs, beaten
- 1 tsp. pure vanilla extract
- 1 tsp. lemon zest
- 1 1/2 cups blueberries
- 2 tbsp. powdered sugar, for garnish

Preheat oven to 350°. Using a serrated knife, cut a round well in each of the slider buns. Tear removed bread into pieces and place aside. In a large bowl, whisk to combine milk, cream, sugar, eggs, vanilla and lemon zest. Add 1 cup of milk mixture to bowl with pieces of torn bread, then add blueberries. Gently stir to combine. Place slider buns into baking dish. Spoon bread and blueberry mixture into each well. Pour remaining milk mixture all over slider buns, then cover baking dish with aluminum foil. Bake for 20 minutes, then remove foil and bake 20-25 minutes more, or until golden. Dust with powdered sugar and serve. Source: Delish.com.

No-Churn Blueberry Graham Cracker Ice Cream

- 3/4 cup fresh or frozen blueberries
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups heavy whipping cream
- 1 cup sweetened condensed milk
- 4 whole graham crackers, coarsely crushed

In a small saucepan, combine blueberries, sugar and vanilla. Bring to a boil; reduce heat. Simmer until mixture begins to thicken, about 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Cool completely. Refrigerate until chilled. In a large bowl, beat cream until soft peaks form. Add condensed milk; beat until mixture thickens. Gently fold graham crackers into cream mixture. Transfer to freezer containers. Drop blueberry mixture by tablespoonfuls over ice cream. Cut through ice cream with a knife to swirl. Freeze for 8 hours or overnight before serving. Source: Delish.com.

Share The Road During Busy Planting Season

By Keri Collins Lewis
MSU Extension Service

Planting season is underway and with it comes the transportation of heavy equipment along Mississippi's roadways.

Drivers can help support local agricultural producers and their $7.4 billion contribution to the state's economy by staying alert while sharing the road with planters, tillers and tractor-mounted sprayers.

Alex Deason, a Mississippi State University Extension Service agent in Sunflower County, said distracted driving causes most of the collisions between personal vehicles and farming equipment.

"From the rear, motorists tend to think everything is moving along at posted speeds, when in reality, operators are traveling at much slower speeds than the posted speed limits," Deason said. "People get busy eating, texting or talking on the phone, and they just don't realize how quickly they are approaching the back of that slow-moving equipment."

Most Mississippi roads have little room to spare, so equipment operators are busy monitoring what is going on both in front of and behind their machinery, while also avoiding mailboxes, utility poles and other roadside objects.

"This may cause the operator to slow down even more and move farther into one lane or another to miss objects, which is why it is so important for drivers to allow space for the equipment," Deason said. "Allow a little extra time to get to work, school or town in case you get caught in traffic for a few minutes."

Planting season typically starts in March and ramps up in April and May when the majority of the crops are planted. Equipment will then be on the roads again in late August through early October as crops are harvested.

Operators are required to have operational warning lights and to display a slow-moving vehicle placard. When possible, many try to have a vehicle follow them to allow other drivers to better see in advance the equipment traveling at slower

Heavy farm equipment, such as this tractor preparing sweet potato beds in Calhoun County on March 8, 2021, are on the roads more as planting season ramps up across the state. speeds.

Deason warned drivers against overtaking farm equipment at highway speeds.

"Don't assume when passing a piece of equipment that there is only one piece in the line," he said. "There could easily be a convoy of machinery moving to another field, and if you can't see around the last piece in line, you are putting yourself and the other people on the road in danger."

Farming is known to be one of the most hazardous occupations. In addition to risks associated with moving equipment, farmers, their family members and their employees face a variety of dangers, from equipment-related injuries to pesticide exposure, financial distress and the volatile nature of global trade. Ongoing physical and emotional stress can have far-reaching effects.

MSU Extension has worked to raise awareness and support for farmers related to the unique stressors they face. Removing the stigma of mental health in rural areas and addressing the unique needs of agricultural producers and workers is a key part of this effort. Extension agents are required to participate in Mental Health First Aid training to better enable them to support their clients.

Mary Nelson Robertson, coordinator of the PReventing Opioid Misuse In the SouthEast, or the PROMISE Initiative, said the agents do not learn how to diagnose mental health challenges, but how to better identify, understand and respond to signs of mental health challenges.

"The agents learn to be 'expert notifiers' and connect individuals who may be experiencing a mental health challenge to appropriate professional help," Robertson said. "Extension agents are known for helping people in their communities, and agents who are trained as Mental Health First Aiders can serve as a bridge to care for community members."

Since the program began, agents have used the information to help others. Robertson said more than 60% of trained agents reported using the skills learned in Mental Health First Aid within the first six months.

"We've had positive feedback from agents indicating the training has been helpful in speaking with people about sensitive topics and made them more aware of what others might be dealing with," Robertson said. "One said the training provided the tools needed to be proactive instead of reactive."

Anyone struggling with mental health challenges is urged to call the Mississippi Department of Mental Health Helpline at 1-877-210-8513. Individuals also can search for mental health providers near them at <http://msdmh.ongovcloud.com/public>.

MAGNOLIA GARDENS

Beautifying Mississippi in Honor of Your Loved Ones!

For six decades, patrons have contributed funds in exchange for a magnolia tree planted in honor of or in memory of loved ones. Over the years the program has planted tens of thousands of magnolia trees along state highways. Due to new regulations, the program needed adjustments. Enjoy the beautiful garden created in honor of your loved ones located at the Mississippi Ag and Forestry Museum in Jackson, Mississippi.

The main garden has a formal design incorporating a variety of plants, trees, flora, stone, water, and wood. The gardens will be strategically lighted to enhance the beauty of the design at night. Enjoy the lush landscape encircling the bronze "Working Man" sculpture donated to the Ag Museum in 2011. Relax on the cypress wood seating to enjoy the container gardens and water features framed with cypress shutters. Floral beds offer seasonal beauty outside of the central area.

The goal is to complete the entire project in 2021, honoring the 60th anniversary of Magnolia Gardens, formerly known as Avenue of Magnolias. We thank you for your contributions thus far. In order to complete the gardens, including the Avenue of Magnolias, $150,000.00 in additional funds are needed.

All donations, regardless of amount, will receive a letter acknowledging their donation. Recipients will receive our Magnolia Garden certificate honoring their loved ones.

Donations exceeding $5,000 will be acknowledged with a plaque at the garden site.

To donate, visit www.msmagnoliagardens.com and select the Contribution Form.

Gifts are Tax Deductible .

Advertising Guidelines

The Mississippi Market Bulletin is published on the 1st and 15th of each month by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce. The Mississippi Market Bulletin is an important way for the Department to disseminate news and information about issues affecting Mississippi's agriculture industry and the Department's operations.

Through its classified advertising section, the Bulletin provides a forum for Mississippi residents to buy and sell agricultural related items while also giving statewide exposure to small farmers who might not normally have the economic resources for such widespread advertising. The Bulletin does not publish commercial or display ads and all items offered for sale must have been produced, raised, grown or operated on the seller's property. Businesses, corporations, dealerships, brokers or other commercial enterprises are not allowed to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin.

Advertising rules and guidelines have been established for the Mississippi Market Bulletin in order to comply with regulations enforced by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce and to maintain the objectives of the publication. The staff of the Mississippi Market Bulletin reserves the right to edit, revise or reject any advertisement.

The Mississippi Market Bulletin assumes no responsibility for any notice appearing in the Bulletin nor for any transaction resulting from published notices. Advertisers are cautioned that it is against the law to misrepresent any product offered for sale in public notices or advertisements carried in any publication that is delivered by the United States Postal Service.

- In order to advertise in the Mississippi Market Bulletin you must be a subscriber. It's FREE to advertise, just include your name, mailing address and account number that the subscription is listed under on each ad that you submit (this information will not be printed). Each subscriber is allowed to advertise two ads in the Bulletin, listing one ad per category.
- All listings must be agriculture related (raised, grown, produced or operated on your farm). At the top of your ad, write the category that the ad should be listed under. We reserve the right to edit, revise or reject each ad. Please print or type your ad.
- There is a 30-word limit for classified advertisements, this includes: price (on the item you are selling), your city, county and telephone number or name and complete address must be included in the ad if you do not list a telephone number. Ads cannot be held over from one issue to another. You must submit them for each issue.

Two-step Method Manages Fire Ants in Lawns, Gardens

By Susan Collins-Smith
MSU Extension Service

Fire ants are the most common pests of home lawns, but homeowners can manage them with the right approach, and spring is the perfect time to begin the process.

"The easiest, cheapest and most effective thing you can do to control fire ants is to use baits and mound treatments consistently," said Blake Layton, Mississippi State University Extension Service entomologist. "Learn to use baits properly and preventively, and you will see 80-90% fewer fire ant mounds in the lawn."

The method is a two-step process. First, apply granular fire ant baits to the entire yard three times per year -- around Easter, Independence Day and Labor Day. Second, apply baits to individual mounds throughout the year as soon as they appear.

"Early spring is one of the best times to apply broadcast fire ant baits because fire ants are actively foraging for food at this time," Layton said. "If you are going to treat only one time per year, do it in the spring after pecan trees begin to leaf out.

"You can improve control by treating again in midsummer and a third time in the fall, especially if you live in a rural area where fire ants are abundant," he said. "In more urban areas, you may only need to treat once or twice per year."

An inexpensive, handheld spreader is sufficient to apply baits and is the best application method for most formulas of fire ant bait.

Spreader that are pulled behind mowers or other motorized equipment are not recommended. The running speed of this equipment affects calibration and will result in excess bait being applied. Baits formulated for these machines also are more expensive.

For property owners who need to treat a large area, Layton recommends the Herd Seeder.

5-acre landscape, is to use a Herd Seeder that is set up and calibrated for the fire ant bait you plan to use," Layton said. "These battery-powered spreaders can be mounted on ATVs or other equipment and calibrated to apply the proper amount of bait."

For mounds that pop up between broadcast applications, keep a can of dry fire ant mound treatment, which can be applied quickly and easily. Individual mound treatments also come in liquid form. Use a liquid -- or drench -- treatment only when it is necessary to destroy the mound within a few hours. Liquid treatments are more time-consuming to apply.

Application rates vary by product. Always read and follow the label instructions. When used as directed, granular fire ant baits are safe for use around people, pets and wildlife.

"People and pets can reenter the area immediately after use," Layton said. "Just avoid spills that result in piles of bait, and avoid sprinkling heavy amounts of bait on the tops of fire ant mounds, which is not the way to properly use granular fire ant baits anyway."

Using the two-step method for the landscape will help control fire ant mounds in the vegetable garden as well.

"The best way to prevent fire ants in the vegetable garden is to control fire ants in the lawn area immediately surrounding the garden," Layton said. "Outside the garden, one can use any fire ant product that is labeled for home lawns."

Some fire ant bait products are safe to use inside the vegetable garden and around other edible crops. For example, gardeners can use products containing the active ingredients spinosad or Methoprene, as well as mound drenches containing permethrin or spinosad, Layton said.

"If you use a product with methoprene, make sure the active ingredient is only methoprene and not methoprene and hydramethylnon," he said. "Always read product labels carefully before treating."

Rick Snyder, Extension vegetable specialist, said gardeners should be careful to use only products labeled for use in vegetable gardens.

"It is illegal to use these products if they are not labeled for use around vegetable crops," he said. "It is also harmful to consume vegetables if you use the wrong product around them."

Many products have active ingredients that can be absorbed into the plant and fruit itself and would be harmful if consumed.

Fire ants are mostly a nuisance to the gardener, but they also can kill and damage plants by tunneling around the roots, chewing on young plants and making aphid infestations worse. They can damage the fruit of certain plants, such as okra and Irish potatoes.

Gardeners who follow organic practices can use some spinosad products, which will be labeled as approved for organic use. Snyder recommends staying away from natural remedies, including the use of grits or hot water, touted to get rid of fire ant mounds.

"None of these really work," Snyder said. "At least, they don't give consistent results. Boiling water may kill a mound. But if you have more than a few, and you need a gallon of boiling water per mound, that's a lot of carrying a full tea kettle to each mound. Also, it leaves dead spots in the yard where the hot water has killed the grass, and it may kill your vegetable plants."

MDAC's Bureau of Plant Industry

We've all heard the old proverb that 'good seed makes for a good crop'... but no one knows this better than the farmer.

The farmer's very livelihood is based on this truth and the hope that each year will yield a plentiful harvest. Our farmers rely on the Mississippi Department of Agriculture and Commerce (MDAC) to protect their livestock and crops as they work to provide for the people of our state, nation and world. This immense responsibility falls to MDAC's Bureau of Plant Industry.

The Bureau of Plant Industry (BPI), located on Mississippi State University's campus in Starkville, is a regulatory and service division that protects the agricultural and horticultural interests of the state from harmful insects, diseases and weeds. The BPI accomplishes this by administering state and federal laws, regulations and programs that deal with plant pests, pesticides, honeybees, plants, professional plant and pest control services, animal feeds, seed, fertilizer, lime and additives to soils and plants.

This division is tasked with registering all pesticides sold, distributed and applied in the state of Mississippi--over 14,000 pesticides annually.

"This time of year, we are extremely busy," said Michael Ledlow, BPI director. "Our division works hard to investigate drift complaints, inspect row crops and homes, train pesticide applicators and analyze seed samples. Thanks to our partnership with Mississippi State Extension Services and our seed testing facilities, we're able to keep the agriculture industry thriving within our great state."

The BPI tests samples at the Mississippi State Seed Testing Laboratory, also located on Mississippi State University's campus within the BPI Building, to ensure that only high-quality seed is sold for planting. The data collected within the lab allows growers to make planting decisions based on accurate statistics, provides information for seed labels, secures varietal purity of certain crops and safeguards consumers through regulatory action.

Currently in the Southeastern United States, there are only two commercial seed labs, and MDAC's State Seed Testing Lab is the largest non-company owned cotton lab in the country. As of June 2020, there were only 107 registered seed technologists in the entire North American continent. MDAC's BPI Seed Lab Director James Smith is one of these select operatives.

Last year, BPI seed analysts ran 16,525 samples and performed over 31,490 tests on those samples which included cotton, soybeans, wheat, rice, and corn.

Year after year, the lab tests samples not only for large seed companies across the country, from Texas to New York, but also for our everyday, hard-working Mississippi farmers. Every Mississippi farmer is allowed one free sample test each year. Lab operations at the State Seed Testing Lab must maintain highly efficient and accurate testing according to the Association of Official Seed Analysts rules.

"Seed is expensive, so it is important to us that our farmers know they can rely on label quality," said Director Smith, "for without that assurance, the farmer will not succeed."

Year after year, the lab tests samples not only for large seed companies across the country, from Texas to New York, but also for our everyday, hard-working Mississippi farmers.

Imported fire ants are a native to South America and first entered the U.S. around 1918 at the Port of Mobile, Alabama, and made their way into Mississippi in the 1930s. They have since spread to every county in the state and throughout most of the Southeast.
