MSU Breeding Program Creating Quality Horses

By Bonnie Coblentz
MSU Extension Service

Horses have been part of Mississippi State University programs for years in teaching, research and the student equestrian team, but breeding has not been a significant aspect until recently.

In the eight years he has been with MSU, Clay Cavinder, Extension equine specialist, has made equine breeding and sales a priority. The average price for yearling and 2-year-old horses has increased steadily over the years to $8,600 in 2022.

"When I came to MSU, my strategy was twofold," Cavinder said. "I wanted to create industry-acceptable, high-end horses, and I want a nationally recognized program here at MSU."

MSU already had a few good mares, and Cavinder began looking for others to add to the stable.

"People who have good mares are not just going to give them away, and they are quite expensive," Cavinder said. "I began to look for good mares that were older and maybe had some reproductive challenges that our College of Veterinary Medicine specialists were able to address."

Cavinder saw significant success with this strategy with Invested In Pine, a then 23-year-old mare that was the last offspring of the top-notch horse, The Investor. With CVM expertise, MSU was able to get two foals from this horse.

Next, he turned his attention to high-end stallions, and finding them was a simpler matter.

"Stud fees are from $1,500 to $4,000 each, but I went to my friends and connections and every one of our stallion breeding services has been donated," Cavinder said. "One person wanted to support our program, and she paid for the breeding from one stallion a year."

The stallions that have been bred to MSU mares and produced foals include Lil Joe Cash, Magnum Chic Dream, Metallic Rebel and VS Code Blue. These stallions are among the best in the industry.

With better quality foals being born at MSU, Cavinder turned his attention to marketing. MSU horses are primarily sold for show competitions, but the goal is to expand into other areas, as well.

"My first strategy was to sell 2-year-olds that were in a marketing program I teach," Cavinder said. "The students were saddle breaking the horses, and we sold them as riding horses."

Cavinder then changed strategy and had his students work with yearlings, teaching them to lunge, accept a saddle and bridle, and take professional photos. The majority of MSU horses are now sold in December as yearlings.

"These horses have never been ridden, and I've found the yearlings are sold for the dream," Cavinder said. "The new owners know they could make that horse into something great."

Another change in the program was making the switch in 2020 to online sales.

Before then, potential buyers would bid on a horse in an informal, unscheduled way, with the high bidder getting the horse. With the COVID-19 restraints that changed business in 2020, Cavinder reluctantly moved to online bids, and the results were fantastic.

"I didn't think online sales were the way to go, but as we moved online, we realized the value," Cavinder said. "Through national exposure, our horses have been seen by a greater volume of clientele, many of whom have the intent of investing resources into training and potentially competing."

"Once our horses are routinely competing in a national spotlight, the visibility of our program is going to be enhanced even more," he said.

A certain level of horse sales is required to maintain the program. These numbers are an easy measure of the profitability of a program, but Cavinder said his top priorities are students and the university mission.

"Our breeding program that is producing more valuable horses benefits the equine program and the entire MSU Animal and Dairy Science program," Cavinder said. "We have horses to support the equestrian team and horses for research and teaching, and the students who come through our program learn how to become better equine producers."

Ashely Glenn, Mississippi Agricultural and Forestry Experiment Station Equine Unit facilities supervisor, said MSU students do not ride the horses in the breeding program, but they do benefit from the sales.

"With better horses to sell, it allows us to have fewer horses on property, which means less expenses and we're able to meet our sales requirement with much fewer head," Glenn said.

Cavinder teaches a sales preparation and marketing class, in which students are responsible for writing up a sales ad, making a sales video and doing the hands-on work with the horses. When the sale is held in December, students get to network with buyers and make connections in the equine industry.

"Our students get exposure to the horse industry, and they learn what high-quality horses are like," Glenn said. "Quality horses have a high mental capacity and physical ability that allows them to be successful as show prospects."

Commissioner's Policy Corner

Commissioner Andy Gipson Addresses Federal Officials Stressing the Urgent Need to Finish the Yazoo Backwater Area Pump Project

By Hannah East,
Marketing Specialist - MDAC

On February 16, 2023, Commissioner Andy Gipson addressed federal policy makers during an Agricultural Leader Roundtable Meeting in Vicksburg to discuss flood risk reduction solutions in the Yazoo Backwater Area. Federal officials attending included Jeanne Gettle, Deputy Regional Administrator with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA); Brian Frazer, Director of Oceans, Wetlands and Communities Division with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency; Michael Connor, Assistant Secretary with the U.S. Department of the Army (Civil Works); and Stacey Jensen, Office of the Assistant Secretary of the U.S. Department of the Army (Civil Works). Gipson stressed the urgency to finish the pumps and gave the following remarks.

I would like to thank each of you for being in Vicksburg today to discuss flood risk reduction solutions in the Yazoo Backwater Area and for your invitation to address the Agricultural Leader Roundtable. I greatly appreciate your five-month timetable in the Joint Memorandum of Collaboration between the U.S.

Department of the Army (Civil Works), U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to reduce flood risk in the Yazoo Backwater Area. I look forward to working together on this urgent need as we move ahead. The time for action is now.

I was delighted to learn about the Joint Memorandum of Collaboration in January. Since we have been talking about this issue for many years, including a dozen or so meetings with your agencies, I hope that this may be the last time we have to gather to talk about this issue. We have talked enough, and now, it is time for action. It is time to quit delaying and finish the pumps.

The Yazoo Backwater Area flood issue has been front and center my entire administration as Ag Commissioner. When I was sworn in April 2018, the floodwaters were rising in the South Delta, and planting was delayed. In 2019, more than half a million acres flooded, so no crops were planted. In 2020, it happened again. This problem could have been fixed 50 years ago!

The Yazoo Backwater Area of Mississippi has experienced significant flooding nine out of the past 12 years, which has devastated local economies and natural resources. If the pump station was in place, much of this man-made devastation could have been prevented. During 2019, over 550,000 acres flooded in the Yazoo Backwater Area, of which more than 225,000 acres were agricultural cropland. Most of this cropland was not planted that year due to the flood. Within the flooded region, 687 homes were affected by the floodwaters, with at least 252 categorized as having major damage or destroyed. The economic and environmental impact to the South Delta was devastating. The estimated economic impact to crops alone was $617 million. In 2020, approximately 490,000 acres flooded in the area once again. Of those acres, 196,000 acres were cropland. The backwater floods of 2019 and 2020 are the two highest backwater flood events since the completion of the Yazoo Backwater Levee and Drainage Structures in 1978. Much of the devastation that South Delta residents face now can be prevented if construction of the Yazoo Backwater Area Pump Project is completed.

If action is not taken, it will happen again. The time for talk is over, and the time for action is now. It is time to finish the pumps.

I sincerely appreciate the opportunity to present on behalf of the State of Mississippi today. This comes at a crucial time when our nation's food security is in jeopardy with supply chain issues, the Russia/Ukraine war, inflationary pressures and many other factors. We desperately need reliable access to this South Delta farmland so our farmers can continue doing the work to keep America fed and clothed.

We have strong confidence in the research of the USACE, and we believe the pumps provide the long-term solution necessary to alleviate the perpetual flooding in the South Delta. We look forward to working with you to see the pumps completed and protect the Yazoo Backwater Area as soon as practical. Thank you.

Commissioner of Agriculture and Commerce Andy Gipson (right side of table) addressed federal policy makers at an Agricultural Leader Roundtable Meeting in Vicksburg discussing flood risk reduction solutions in the Yazoo Backwater Area. He expressed appreciation for the Joint Memorandum of Collaboration between among the U.S. Department of the Army (Civil Works), U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to reduce flood risk in the Yazoo Backwater Area and stressed the urgency to finish the Yazoo Backwater Area Pump Project.

The 2023 Dixie National Quarter Horse Show

By The Dixie National Quarter Horse Show

All the ribbons are packed up, and the exhibitors and staff are back home. The Dixie National Quarter Horse Show is a wrap. The show started on February 7 and 8 with the Equestrian with Disabilities events. All of the participants had a great time, and a lot of new friends were made. We are grateful to our sponsors, volunteers and exhibitors who made this portion of our show a success.

The Dixie National AQHA event began on Tuesday February 14, with roping, cow horse and boxing continuing with large numbers. Great prizes, including $10,000, were on the line.

The fifth CC Dubois Memorial Tie-Down Roping was held. The event was sponsored by Elite Custom Saddlery, which generously donated custom halters and portfolios to the winners of every roping class at the horse show. This is the fifth year that Elite Custom Saddles has donated the Andrew McBeath Memorial High Point Cattle Horse saddle, which was awarded to Casey Hicks and CFR Decada 052 owned by Jared Crain.

Gary Wells Performance Horses, along with Carl and Pam McBeath, paid out to the fastest time in the youth and amateur tie-down roping. The reining and ranch riding numbers were large.

Tuesday night concluded with speed events which had $3,500 added money.

Our Equine Expo this year was held on the upper level of the Equine Center and outside in the trailers with a variety of vendors. The Expo was well received.

Wednesday saw reining, ranch riding and ranch trail. This year, we also offered Any Breed Classes and the new AQHA class Working Western Rail. All of these had a high number of entries.

Thursday was a very full day of VRH classes. We offered all levels, including Rookie, and all events to include Cutting and cow horse. There were large classes here as well.

Friday was our day for showmanship and English classes.

This year, Saturday included our grandparents' favorites - leadline and stick horse races. We had many new leadline exhibitors, and the stick horse exhibitors were very lively which made for a fun class. Our Stick Horse class sponsor, Tom McBeath Quarter Horses, donated the stick horses, and every exhibitor got to take their horse home. We also had our halter and western pleasure classes on Saturday.

Saturday night we were fortunate to have Tim Kimura, M.O.T. with us. He conducted a "Ride the Pattern" clinic which received rave reviews. The clinic was followed by paid trail practice.

We concluded on Sunday with a day of trail. All trail courses were written, prepared and maintained by the M.O.T. Tim Kimura.

Egg Prices Responding to High Demand, Lower Supply

By Bonnie Coblentz
MSU Extension Service

Shoppers facing sticker shock at the grocery store know that eggs are part of the cost increase, but they may not know why.

Josh Maples, an agricultural economist with the Mississippi State University Extension Service, said egg prices over the Christmas holiday were more than double what they were at the same time in 2021.

"Retail egg prices averaged $4.25 per dozen in December, a record high," Maples said. "This compares to $1.79 per dozen in December 2021."

The primary cause of the high prices is a disruption in supply at a time when consumer demand for eggs is strong.

"Highly pathogenic avian influenza, or HPAI, which is often called bird flu, is an important concern each year, but it was especially problematic in the U.S. in 2022," Maples said. "The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that HPAI was detected in 307 commercial flocks in 2022."

Only one of these affected flocks was in Mississippi. HPAI is very contagious among birds, so USDA requires strict containment protocols be followed to prevent additional spread to other flocks. These measures include depopulation of infected flocks.

In all, HPAI affected about 57 million birds in 2022. Of those, nearly 40 million were egg-laying hens lost to the disease between February and December 2022. Those hens represented about 12% of the egg-laying birds lost to HPAI.

"Fewer laying hens has led to fewer eggs produced and tighter supplies for egg consumers," Maples said.

Lower egg availability coincided with the holiday season, which is the food's peak season for consumption. USDA estimates Americans used 11.4 eggs per household during the Thanksgiving holiday and 8.6 eggs per household over Christmas. Households in 2022 used an estimated 1.6 more eggs at Christmas than they did in 2021.

"Even at high prices, U.S. consumers still purchased a lot of eggs over the holidays. Strong demand at a time when supplies are tighter drove egg prices higher," he said.

Byron Williams, Extension food processing specialist, said high demand for processed food products also stretched the egg supply.

"Eggs are very versatile products and serve many roles in food manufacturing processes," Williams said.

"Most battered, breaded and baked products utilize some form of eggs, and egg whites, yolks and mixtures all play vital roles in the manufacture of various processed products."

Consequently, these factors led to increased usage and demand for eggs at a time when supplies were limited due to the 2022 bird flu epidemic and compounded supply chain issues.

Although high egg prices persisted through January and into February, Maples said they are expected to moderate in coming months. Other than strong egg demand at Easter, demand should soon ease, and prices should fall as producers continue to recover from the supply disruptions of 2022.

Jessica Wells, Extension poultry specialist, said the answer to the problem of expensive eggs is not to quickly decide to have a flock of chickens at home.

"Even though egg prices have drastically increased, the price to feed, house and manage your flock will still be very costly," Wells said.

Additionally, since HPAI is carried by wild and migratory fowl, backyard flocks are highly susceptible to the virus because they easily come in contact with infected birds.

"The biggest help we can all be to the industry and aid in supply and demand issues is being diligent with biosecurity," she said. "If you have a backyard flock, make sure you are doing everything possible to not infect other flocks. Even if you do not have chickens, you could still potentially carry the virus to someone who does have a flock by unknowingly stepping in contamination while walking outdoors."

For more information on HPAI and how to prevent its spread, view the Extension Information Sheet 2013 at <http://extension.msstate.edu/publications/information-sheets/avian-influenza-frequently-asked-questions>.
